Is Against A General Rent Hike

Truman for Firm Hold Except in Hardships — He Defends Fleming

By The Associated Press

Rent Rise Highlights

Tuesday—Senate banking committee considers two rent bills—one would abolish ceilings immediately, the other would permit 15 percent increase.

Wednesday—President Truman quashes order to raise rent ceilings 10 percent prepared at Office of Temporary Controls.

Friday — Senate banking committee learns Fleming ordered rent increase which Truman halted.

By Jack Bell

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1—(AP)—President Truman stood firm today against rent increases except where landlords are up against hardship while Senator Capehart (R-Ind) cried "pure politics" at Mr. Truman's order quashing a general increase.

The President told an unusual Saturday news conference:

1. He still is determined to hold the line against any blanket rent increases.

2. There should be some adjustments where rents are so low as to work a hardship on the property owner.

3. He has no intention to penalize Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, head of the Office of Temporary Controls, for the mixup that occurred Wednesday when an order by Fleming for a general 10 percent increase was drawn up. It was subsequently killed by the President.

Sponsors Boost Bill

Capehart is one of the Republican senators who have sponsored a bill to boost rent ceilings 15 percent. He told a reporter he is satisfied the administration is "thoroughly convinced of the need for an increase or it would not have gone so far as to prepare an order."

"Knowing the necessity of an upward revision in rent ceilings, the President thinks he is going to force the Republicans in congress to do something about it and then blame them for doing it," he declared.

"Well, here is one United States senator who is willing to accept the responsibility for seeing that this situation is corrected."

Mr. Truman described Fleming as one of the ablest men in the government.

Fleming told the senate banking committee yesterday that he had talked to the President about rents in general and had left the conference thinking that he would be justified in ordering an increase. He said he did not know then of Mr. Truman's repeated opposition to any general boost in ceilings.

The President related that Fleming had told the committee the exact truth when he testified that he directed James W. Follin, his deputy, to put the increase into effect. It subsequently was stopped at the White House while Fleming was in Iowa attending the funeral of his mother.

Senator McCarthy (R-Wis) commented he thought it was "awfully funny that a general would have an order drawn, ready to issue without having had White House approval."

The banking committee, considering ceiling increase bills, will resume hearings Monday with representatives of landlords and James Carey, CIO secretary ,as witnesses.

Three Die of Exposure in Storm

JEFFERSON, Wis., Feb. 1—(AP)—A searching party today found the bodies of a man and wife and their 11 year old daughter huddled under a piece of carpeting along a fence where they died of exposure during Wednesday night's blinding snowstorm.

Harlow Block, 41, his wife, Gilma, 37, and their daughter Patricia were found less than a quarter of a mile from their farm home where five other children in the family remained while the three set out on a shopping trip which ended in tragedy.

Sheriff George Perry said the family car stalled and the three apparently attempted to grope their way home along the fence.

Bomb Explodes in Office of Court Official

NUERNBERG, Germany, Feb 1—(AP)—A bomb exploded tonight in the office of Caiml Sachs, president of the de-Nazification court which is trying Franz Von Papen, former German diplomat who was acquitted of war crimes by the international military tribunal.

So far as was known, the building was unoccupied at the time of the blast and there was no casualties.

The explosion blew out the windows and doors of Sachs' office.

The building also houses the offices of the Social Democratic party and the newspaper Fraenkische Tagesport.

Guarantee of Peace Would Save 16 Billion

Such is Assertion Of Representative Cannon of Mo.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1—(AP)—Rep. Cannon (D-Mo) said today that if world leaders can guarantee peace, the United States could save some $16,000,000,000 in the next fiscal year.

Cannon, ranking Democrat on the house appropriations committee, did his calculating as Chairman Carroll Reece of the Republican National Committee urged the GOP rank and file to support efforts of their congressmen to trim what he called President Truman's "outrageously padded" budget.

Mr. Truman's estimate for spending in the year beginning July 1 is $37,500,000,000. Cannon figured that $5,000,000,000 of this is untouchable, being set aside for interest payments of the national debt. But as for the remaining $32,500,000,000 he said:

"If we are to have no war, then we could cut the budget in two. We should wait until after the international situation has been cleared up so that we can more accurately measure our needs in the light of potential military requirements."

Cannon specifically suggested that all the talk about how much to spend and how much to tax be halted until after the Moscow meeting of foreign ministers next month.

Asked To Back Leaders

Reece's appeal to his party members also asked them to back up their leaders in congress on "a substantial cut in individual income taxes."

Reece sent out his letter shortly after party leaders on capital hill had thrown overboard the "across the board" principle of cutting taxes. This idea would give the same percentage cut to large and small income alike, up to $300,000 —as embodied in the Knutson bill.

Senator Taft (R-Ohio), head of the senate GOP steering committee, said in a radio interview last night he believes there will be no "across the board" reduction. He reasserted confidence there can be an overall 20 per cent cut in individual taxes, with some taxpayers getting a $20 per cent slash, some 15 or 10 and "in some cases nothing."

This would mean a sharp revision of Knutson's bill, putting biggest emphasis on relief for small incomes.

Cannon, talking to reporters, jibbed at Republican demands for sharp cuts in federal spending and said it is too early to determine just how many federal employes can be dropped.

"But," he said, "we'll cut out the surplus employes.

"With the end of the war and with the elimination of a number of war agencies, it stands to reason that there will be too many.

"We'll cut them down to the point where the reduction doesn't interfere with the efficiency of government.

"You can't start a war overnight, and you can't end one overnight."

Cab Driver Shot And Wounded

CHICAGO, Feb. 1 —(AP)— A Chicago cab driver was shot and wounded last night and police said his assailant left personal belongings in the cab including a copy of a Wisconsin driver's license issued to Elmer Henry Pierce, the name of a man wanted in Milwaukee on a murder charge in a street car slaying.

Captain Andrew Aitken, deputy chief of detectives, said a newspaper picture found with the license was identified by a passerby as that of the man who shot and wounded Edward Swanson, 38, the cab driver. Swanson said the man told him "I killed once and I'll kill again."

Swanson, shot in the back of the neck and arm, was taken to the Woodlawn hospital where his condition was said to be not serious.

Aitken said that the picture was in a newspaper clipping telling of the shooting of Miss Virginia Szeremet, 24, Pierce's niece.

Pierce has been the object of a Milwaukee police search since he allegedly shot and fatally wounded Miss Szeremet and wounded three other persons aboard a crowded street car in Milwaukee last Jan. 7.

Aitken said Swanson related he was accosted by the man in front of the Kenrose hotel, on Chicago's south side. The robber took $1 from Swanson after binding his hands with wire.

Miss Valerie Haggerty, 26, emerged from the hotel, after Swanson had been bound, Aitken said, and asked Swanson to drive her away. He told her he was being held up and lunged for the man who had tied him.

The assailant fired three shots and fled, Aitken said.

Sixteen Killed In Plane Crash

French Aircraft Hits Peak and Falls in Flames

By Luis C. Lupi

LISBON, Portugal, Feb. 1—(AP)—Sixteen persons were killed and one man survived today when a French passenger plane enroute from Paris to Lisborn crashed into a peak and fell in flames near the ancient royal mountain resort of Cintra, on Portugal's seacoast 12 miles northwest of Lisbon.

Portugese authorities said the plane carried 12 passengers and a crew of five.

(Air France, operator of the twin-engine Dakota transport, issued a statement in Paris tonight, however, which said only 11 passengers and a crew of five were aboard. The statement did not specify how many persons had been killed, but unofficial Paris reports said 15 persons lost their lives.)

The first investigators to reach the scene found the plane completely destroyed. They discovered 13 bodies—badly burned and with all marks of identification destroyed—immediately, and began combing the wreckage for others.

Everything Went Dark

The survivor, Eugene Leonard, a French businessman, remembered nothing of the crash after losing consciousness and could not describe the disaster.

Leonard, suffering from a fractured leg, other injuries and shock, related:

"I was sitting next to my wife when everything went dark. I must have become unconscious. When I came to, I was lying about 30 yards from the blazing plane.

"Moving as I could around the wreckage, I found nobody else alive. They were all inside the plane, including my wife."

Leonard, about 38 years old, was going to Lisbon for a two week visit with his wife's grandmother. Some sources in Lisbon said they believed members of the famous French ballet, scheduled to perform here, were among the victims.

It was the third major air disaster in Europe within a week.

New Parking Meters Have Been Installed

Latest in Multiple Clocks Used; Old Clocks Modernized

The new dual parking meters, multiple type, will begin operation in Sedalia Monday morning. Along with the new meters is a new schedule of operation, otherwise a redistricting of the parking meters from that which had been followed for the past several years. The redistricting is done in accordance with a survey made by engineers of the parking meter company as to traffic, and new time parking limits are announced where the meters are to be operated.

All of the old meter clocks which have been in use in Sedalia for the past several years have been worked over, and new attachments added to modernize them. The meters now all conform with the new type time clocks, inasmuch as they are now multiple.

Had But One Choice

Prior to the obtaining of the new type time clocks, motorists had but one choice, one penny for either a 12 or 24 minute time or a nickle for a one or two hour limit. Under the conversion of the old time pieces with the new they are multiple as to pennies. The new meters will take from one penny to five pennies or one nickle.

An example in the one-hour parking district, one penny will give 12-minutes, if a person feels he will stay more than 12 minutes two pennies, can be inserted in the slot and 24-minutes will be had, of three, four pennies and five, each penny adding 12 minutes to the time up to the one-hour limit. In the two-hour zone a penny gives 24-minutes, two pennies 48, and each penny adds 24 minutes up to two hours.

Something more to help the parking motorist in picking out a parking meter in a certain zone. One-hour time limit meter posts are to be painted in aluminum color; the two hour zone the post will be an orange color, while the fifteen minute parking zone which is in the area of a bank or in front of the post office, will be painted a bronze color.

Fifteen Minute Zone

These fifteen minute zones, give parking time for fifteen minutes only and cost one-penny, not a nickle as so many people had thought. The multiple meters will not work here, otherwise, parking in this zone is restricted to fifteen minutes to a car.

M. J. Rooney, J. Malone and Frank Clark, representatives of the Dual Parking Meter Co., Canton, Ohio, have been in Sedalia the past three weeks assembling the new meters, and making the conversion of the old time clocks to modernize them.

Here are the parking zones:

Ohio avenue, from the Missouri Pacific tracks to sixth street, one-hour, equipped with the multiple meter.

Lamine avenue Main street to Fifth street, two-hours, multiple meters.

Osage avenue, Missouri Pacific tracks to Fifth street, two-hour, multiple meters.

Kentucky avenue, Missouri Pacific tracks to Second street, two hours, multiple meters.

Main street, Lamine avenue to Moniteau avenue, two-hours, with multiple meters.

Second street, Lamine to Osage, one hour. Osage to Moniteau and Lamine to Massachusetts avenue, two hours. All multiple meters.

Third street, Osage avenue to Lamine avenue, one-hour while Lamine to Massachusetts avenue, two hours. Multiple meters.

Fourth street, Osage to Lamine one-hour parking. Lamine avenue to Massachusetts avenue two-hours, multiple meters. Meters will be installed from Osage to Kentucky and will be two-hours.

Fifth street, Osage avenue to Lamine avenue, one-hour multiple meters.

Sixth street, Osage avenue to Ohio avenue, one-hour, multiple meters.

Two Arrested in Murder Case

ST. PAUL, Feb. 1—(AP)—Arrest of two men charged with murder in the decapitation slaying of Alvin L. Maddox at Mohall, N. D., last August, was announced today by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

N. B. Rhodes, FBI agent in charge at St. Paul, identified the men as Alvus Curtis, 49 and his son, Roy Virgil Curtis, 23, both of Alto, Texas. The elder Curtis was arrested at Huntsville, Ark., by MBI agents, state police and local authorities, Rhodes said. The son was arrested at his home in Alto.

The decapitated body of Maddox, whose home was Coolidge, Texas, was found in the Mouse river near Mohall last August 21. Four days later the head was found in the same stream. Identification was established, the FBI said, through its laboratories in Washington.

Rhodes said that Maddox and the two Curtises were working as farmhands in North Dakota at the time of the slaying.

A Chevrolet truck, belonging to Maddox and which had been missing since the slaying, was in the younger Curtis' possession when he was arrested, Rhodes added.

Step for Added Deputy Clerks

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 1—(AP)—An amendment to new magstrate court laws so magistrates could appoint additional deputy clerks without approval of the county court was approved here today by directors of the Missouri Bar Association.

The Bar Association, holding its semi-annual meetin~ here, approved the amendment as suggested by the newly-formed magistrates' organization. The proposed change also would restrict the number of additional clerks the magistrate could employ.

Nelson B. Evans of Carthage, one of the magistrates who appeared before the bar group's directsor, said the St. Louis county court had refused to permit hiring of extra help. Such additional court employes, under the proposed amendment, would be paid by the county court.

Strike Against Kansas City Star Ended

Publication Be Resumed Monday By Agreement

PRESSMEN'S HOME, Tenn., Feb. 1—(AP)—George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's Union, announced tonight the settlement of a 16-day-old strike of Printing Trades Unions against the Kansas City Star.

"Settlement has been arrived at for all printing trades with the management and resumption of publications will begin immediately," Berry said.

"The facts are," Berry added, "that rates of compensation for everyone were agreed to by unanimous consent of all present at the conference."

Berry said that he and Roy A. Roberts, managing editor of the Star, had prepared a joint statement detailing the agreement. Present at the two-day conference, he said, were Roberts and four assistants, and six representatives of the Printing Trades Unions.

Announce Agreement

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 1—(AP)—The Kansas City Star announced tonight that an agreement had been reached tonight ending the strike of a group of contract carriers that has prevented the newspaper from publishing for the past 16 days.

Officials of the Star said that an agreement had been reached at Pressmen's Home, Tenn., between Roy A. Roberts, managing editor of the Star, and George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's Union, and that the newspaper would resume publication Monday morning.

A study of the legal status of the striking carriers will be made, the Star said, and in the meantime the carriers association will resume distribution of the newspaper which has not published since Jan. 17.

The Star said that the management had agreed that there would be no discrimination against the carriers participating in the strike.

An increase in wages for the pressmen that had been under discussion, was agreed upon. Details of the wage agreement had not been received here, the Star added.

A group of carriers, affiliated with the International Pressmen and Assistants Union (AFL), set up a picket line around the Star after the newspaper management

The blast first was reported from Galveston as a concussion of unknown origin.

The barges were the Carmichael and Vivaclare, owned by the Charles C. Smith company of Houston. They were empty barges with a 19,000 barrel capacity, returning from Baton Rouge, La.

PAWTUCKET, R. I. Feb. 1—(AP)—The body of 17-year-old Rita Bouchard, stabbed 30 times in the neck, chest and back, was found late today in a lonely patch of swampland and a medical examiner termed it a "fiendish type of murder."

A Pawtucket man out for an afternoon walk through the woods near Ten Mile River found the body about 100 yards from a dirt road known locally as "lovers' lane."

Medical Examiner Albert J. Gaudet said the wounds indicated that the girl was attacked with a long thin-bladed weapon. Dr. Gaudet said there was no evidence of rape and that the girl had been dead four to six hours when she was found.

Pastor at St. Paul Church For 25 Years

Anniversary of Rev. Heidbreder Was Observed

Sunday, January 26, 1947 will be a day long remembered by the Rev. H. H. Heidbreder and his congregation as it marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of his pastorate of the Saint Paul Lutheran church in Sedalia.

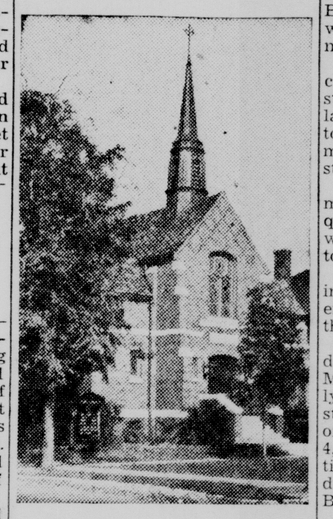

Mr. Heidbreder was born in Quincy, Ill., where he received his early education later St. Paul's college at Concordia, Mo., from which he was graduated in 1910. He then entered the Concordia Theological Seminary in St. Louis, and was graduated from there in 1913. During the following summer he received a call from St. Peter's congregation at La Grange, which he accepted and was ordained on August 19, 1913 by the Rev. William Halleberg, Ja., who had encouraged him to enter the ministry.

He was married on August 30, 1916 to Miss Marie Isabel Kiess and they have one daughter, Elizabeth Joann, now Mrs. J. A. Cobb, of Chicago.

Here Since January 1922

Mr. Heidbreder came to Sedalia on January 22, 1922, as pastor of the St. Paul's Lutheran church which was then a small frame church located in the 500 block on South Lafayette avenue. The parsonage was beside the church. A year later the new parsonage was built at 311 East Broadway and in 1927 work was begun on the new church which was dedicated on Mother's Day in 1928.

Observance of the anniversary was held Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock. The festival sermon was by the Rev. Karl Niermann, of Concordia, who, as pastor of the Cole Camp church, had installed Mr. Heidbreder as pastor of the Sedalia church in 1922.

The Rev. H. J. Gerike was in charge of the order of the service.

During the service letters of congratulations were read and generous gifts were presented the pastor from the congregation and various societies.

A reception was held immediately following the service with the Rev. J. C. Schedler as toastmaster.

Out-of-town guests in addition to the ministers were Mrs. Cobb and sons, Jeffrey Michael and Joel P., of Chicago, Mr. Heidbreder's sisters, Mrs. William Meierkord, Quincy, Ill., and Mrs. Wilford Wolfmeyer, Mt. Sterling, Ill., and the Rev. Theodore Maschoff of St. Louis.

The debt of the church was completely liquidated last year.

Tension Is High in Palestine

British Set Up Barricades of Barbed Wire in Jewish Quarters

By Carter L. Davidson

JERUSALEM, Feb. 1—(AP)—British troops rolled out new barbed wire barricades and merged with police to form heavy street patrols of eight to 10 men today as rumors spread that Dov Bel Gruner, convicted member of the Jewish underground would go to the gallows on Tuesday.

Some Jewish quarters in the city were divided into half mile square pens by triple barbed wire rolls.

A reliable informant said the Palestine government had informed Jewish agency leaders that if the tall bushy-haired Hungarian Jew hangs Palestine would be placed under 24-hour curfew. If any violence occurs, as has been threatened by Irgun Zvai Leumi, the underground group, martial law will be imposed on some parts of the country, the Jewish leaders were told.

Gruner, clad in the dyed red overalls of a condemned man, sat in his cell in a Jerusalem jail with the draft of an appeal for permission to take his case to a higher court still unsigned. He was sentenced to death on Jan. 2 for an attack on a police station nine months before.

Today One Of Decision

Attorneys for Gruner, who became an underground expert by dodging Hitler's men, said he did not want to appeal. It was understood the Palestine government had given him until tomorrow to decide.

Tension mounted because of Gruner's stand since most observers believe that his hanging would result in Irgun Zvai Leumi's making good its previous threat of "immediate reaction" to his execution.

One reliable informant said a Jewish agency leader was informed by Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham, the Palestine high commissioner, that curfew and martial law might be necessary because the agency had "failed to take its own steps to curb terrorism."

Cunningham received Isaac Herzog, chief Rabbi of Palestine, tonight an hour after the Rabbi was reported to have visited Gruner in Jerusalem prison.

It was reported also, without confirmation, that King Abdullah of Transjordan had offered an asylum in his country to as many British wives and children as wish to go there rather than voyage to Great Britain.

Protest Evacuation

Meanwhile, housewives, businessmen and government officials continued to protest the action of the Palestine government yesterday in ordering the evacuation to Britain by Tuesday of all British women and children and some non-essential civilians.

Wives of Palestine police officers were given the option of staying with their husband, if the latter agree. The women, banded together in the Sarona encampment at Tel Aviv, declared "we stay."

Wives of British soldiers who moved into "married officers' quarters" last night learned they would follow the civilians wives to the United Kingdom.

Evacuation operations will be in charge of the army, and every effort will be taken to safeguard the comfort of the evaeuees.

Informants at the Lydda airdrome said 40 Dakotas were due Monday to aid in evacution directly to England.

stressed there was no necessity of evacuating the approximately 4,900 American civilians in Palestine since there is apparently no danger to nationals other than British subjects.

(The U. S. State Department said in Washington today that any American can leave Palestine who wants to do so, and no special American diplomatic officials

The Daily Washington Merry-go-Round

WASHINGTON—The splurge of recent air crashes is causing considerable worry to the secret service agents responsible for the life of the President.

The secret service is afraid the day may come when the President's special plane, "The Sacred Cow," may also encounter bad weather or mechanical trouble. They also know something about the President's propensity for taking off, rain or shine, and it keeps them awake at nights thinking about it. When he wants to go some place, he simply goes.

Result is that a quiet campaign is under way inside the secret service to persuade the President to abandon air travel generally. They want him to take the train—as President Roosevelt did on almost all occasions. FDR enjoyed train travel. It rested him and gave him a chance to get caught up with his correspondence. Truman, however, loves the speed of an airplane. He can get to Kansas City in four hours, whereas it would take him two nights and a day by train.

The secret service has never recovered from the scare it received on Christmas, 1945, when Mr. Truman flew home to Independence in weather that had grounded all commercial airlines. However, the President is a hard man to persuade, and his secret service bodyguards are not any too optimistic about the chances of keeping him grounded. The best thing they can really hope for is a new and larger plane from the war department in the near future.

Marshall in British Cabinet

If a Britisher were permitted to sit in on an American cabinet meeting, a howl of protest would go up from the isolationist press. However, here is a conversation which Gen. Phil Fleming, chief of the office of temporary controls, had with friends after Gen. George Marshall's first appearance at a cabinet meeting as secretary of state.

"Though George has been a top flight official in Washington for a long time, this was the first real cabinet meeting he ever attended," said Fleming. "At least, it was the first one in this country."

"What do you mean?" Fleming was asked.

"Well, you see, General Marshall began attending cabinet meetings on foreign soil. He was present at three meetings of the British cabinet during the war."

Note—Though Marshall sat at British cabinet meetings, Winston Churchill got sour on his determination to stage a cross-channel invasion and vetoed him as supreme allied commander.

"No Mud Slinging"—Truman

President Truman's private directions to his staff on harmonizing with the GOP-controlled congress may be summed up in three words:

"Keep it impersonal."

Truman doesn't want any part of those free-swinging, name-calling bouts with congress that kept the press galleries scribbling when Franklin Roosevelt was in the White House.

At the same time, he has told the cabinet that he won't duck a scrap when "honest differences of opinion" arise.

"We will have our differences with congress," the President told his staff recently. "We are bound to have them. However, I am convinced that I can get along with congress as long as we keep our quarrels on an impersonal basis. Let's lay off the personality stuff."

The Nebraska Undertaker

New Hampshire's sharp-tongued Senator Charles Tobey is getting the same reputation as another high-principled Republican individualist, the late Senator George Norris of Nebraska. Strangely enough, Tobey's victim is usually the irrepressible Nebraska undertaker, Kenneth Wherry, who succeeded Norris in the senate.

During the debate on the senate small business committee Wherry was first interrupted by Senator Allen Ellender of Louisianna, who asked why he had proposed a new special small business committee, rather than extending the old one. Wherry's answer was tortuous and labored. Finally Ellender blurted out:

"My suspicion is that the Senator wants a new resolution adopted so that he can be chairman of the committee, and not permit the senator from Iowa (George Wilson) who is the ranking member, to be chairman."

Heatedly Wherry replied that he had known all along this was what Ellender was getting at. It was of no importance to him, he insisted, who was named chairman of the new committee.

"But I think I have seen quite a few articles in the press in which such a suggestion is made," replied Ellender.

"Yes, in Drew Pearson's column," Wherry shot back.

"And we can make a pretty good guess about it," said Ellender, smiling.

"Yes; Drew Pearson, Drew Pearson!" shouted the gentleman from Nebraska.

Tobey Goes to Town

Later Tobey took the floor and repeated Ellender's charges. The only motive for setting up this committee and for continuing the war investigating committee, argued the New Hampshire Senator, was to provide committee chairmanships for Wherry and Senator Brewster of Maine.

"That, Mr. President, is reducing it to the lowest terms. But it is not good enough. The price is too high."

Tobey then recounted that he had been told a day earlier by Senator Bob Taft of Ohio that Wherry and Brewster had appeared before the Republican steering committee last November "pleading the cause of special committees."

Wherry asked Tobey to yield, but Tobey, with much to say in a short space of time, refused. Again Wherry interrupted.

"When the Senator had the floor I courteously asked him to yield and he declined," Tobey shouted. Then, as Wherry began to speak anyway, Tobey thundered on: "I shall heap coals of fire on his head."

Again Wherry started to speak, but Tobey drowned him out: "I yield to him—provided he uses his own time."

Without another word, Wherry took his seat. Red-faced, he did not again try to interrupt Tobey.

"The Senator," was Tobey's parting shot, "is not a good trader."

Capital Chaff

Alert Senator Brewster of Maine, giving colleagues an off-the-record report of his recent Latin-American trip, disclosed that British agents are selling British planes all over Latin America and outselling the USA. They are taking orders for delivery on jet planes which will be far ahead of our transports. In two years, Brewster predicts, the British will force Latin-Americans to use British-type instruments for landing, thus making it difficult for American planes to operate on the same fields . . . There are now eleven foreign airlines entering the United States . . . R. M. Davis, the West Virginia coal operator who has crusaded so hard for peace, is now staging a contest for the best high school essay on "Creating a Department of Peace . . . Astute young GOP Congressman Gordon Canfield, of New Jersey, proposes a bill automatically making an ex-President a Senator-at-large. He feels that the talents of ex-Presidents should not be wasted . . .War Assets Administrator Gen. R. M. Littlejohn is so used to getting brickbats that the following praise almost knocked him for a loop. Joseph K. Gruner, of Paterson, N. J., wrote: "I am writing to tell you how cordially I was received by your office. I was greatly impressed by the way your department helped me."

Love Has Two Faces

By Irene Lonnen Ernhart

Copyright, 1947, NEA SERVICE, INC.

I

IT was just like Mike not to let her know he was coming. Not that there was any definite reason why he should.

Cassie Fletcher folded the evening paper carefully and put it on the worn step beside her. Her hands were trembling a little.

"Mike Cargill, once reported missing, prisoner in a German camp, long hospitalized, due home tomorrow. Town prepares welcome for one of its heroes." That was what the paper had said.

The last streamers of August sunlight lay across the porch. Pungent smoke from Papa's after-supper pipe floated from the porch swing where he lay reading the want-ad section. Mama rocked placidly at the other end of the porch, making a loose board creak rhythmically. From indoors came the sound of Sid and Leni's quarreling as they coped with the supper dishes.

"Leni!" Mama's voice rose petulantly. "Let Sid dry if he wants to, this time. He washed last night!"

Leni came to the screen door. "It ruins my hands, Mama. It simply ruins my hands." Her voice was tearful. "And I just got fresh polish on! He's doin' it a purpose! And anyway, it wouldn't hurt him to do the dishes alone!"

Mama got up, sighing heavily, and lumbered inside.

Cassie began to think about Mike Cargill again. The day he'd left. She could still see him, coming along the platform, his small, compact figure swinging along, his dark hair almost blue in the sunlight, his eyes that queer electric blue that never fades, and with a sort of hardness in them. Yet Mike wasn't hard.

"Hello baby!" he'd said, his deep voice lifting a trifle, as if he hadn't known she'd come down to see him off. "Well, I guess this is it."

She'd been a little let-down at the way he'd said it. Other couples were clinging together, kissing. And Mike just stood there grinning at her like a small boy off on some daring trip. He'd smoked a cigaret and had nothing much to say. But when the train came grinding to a stop he grinned at her again and kissed her, a hard, exciting kiss that she could still feel, she remembered it so well.

* * *

HIS letters had been few and far between and very short those three years he'd been gone.

Well, there hadn't been anything definite between them, anyhow. But Cassie was in love with Mike Cargill. She'd had dates with other fellows but they hadn't meant a thing. There'd been Mike in her heart, filling it completely, all the time.

Tomorrow he'd be home! Cassie's heart skipped a beat.

Papa rapped his pipe on the porch railing and cleared his throat. "You goin' to the depot tomorrow, Cass?"

He pronounced it "dee-pot."

Cassie shook her head. "I couldn't get off," she said.

"They're goin' to have quite a doin's for that Cargill fella. Thought you might ask off and go."

"And get docked for a whole day's work and lose my time and a half Saturday?" Cassie said. She jumped up and started inside,

"She's too young to have so many dates, Mama. You know that," Cassie warned. "And especially with older fellows."

"I tried to tell her," Mama sniffed. "But you know how she is when she gets her head set on something."

flinging the paper into Mama's rocker.

She hadn't meant to sound rude to Papa, and she hadn't meant to let it slip out about not wanting to lose pay. It wasn't exactly Papa's fault that his rheumatism kept him from working regularly at anything, that most of the financial burden of the family fell on her shoulders.

She went out to the kitchen, smoothing at the wrinkles in the front of her yellow linen dress. She tried to take the dishrag out of Mama's hands.

"That good-for-nothing little Leni!" she said. "Mama, how many times do I have to tell you it's not good to give in to her like that!"

"Oh go on, Cassie, I'd as soon wash 'em as not, and you'll spoil your dress," Mama whined helplessly. Her blue eyes watered a little. "Anyway, Leni's got a date with the Cavendish boy again."

"The Cavendish boy!" Cassie echoed. She reached for the apron that hung in back of the door. Then she appropriated Sid's dishtowel and shooed him out of the kitchen. "Leni certainly is going up in the world! But she's too young to have so many dates, Mama. You know that. And especially with older fellows."

"I tried to tell her," Mama sniffed. "But you know how she is when she gets her head set on something."

* * *

LENI came out of the tiny bedroom off the kitchen. She leaned against the door casing for an instant, her blue eyes half shadowed with incredible dark lashes, her small, full figure looking voluptuous in the tight black skirt and the blue sweater that matched her eyes. Her bright hair was caught to the top of her head and held with three or four blue daisies of the same shade of blue as the sweater. She looked defiantly at Cassie, her full lower lip stuck out in a pout.

Cassie laughed suddenly. "Oh all right, Leni," she said. She turned around and began stacking the dishes.

Leni pranced out, slamming the front screen behind her, and there was the sudden hoot of a car horn in front of the house.

That would be the Cavendish boy. A tiny icicle of warning traced its way up Cassie's spine. What did Lon Cavendish see in Leni? He usually ran around with the crowd up on the hill. The Martin girl, Bryn Mawr and Country Club, mink coats and real pearls, was his usual style.

When Mama finished at the sink, she limped out to the front porch again. The rocker began to creak. Papa turned on the small porch radio and the sound of the music came faintly to Cassie, as she walked back and forth putting things away. It set her to thinking about Mike again, about the times when they used to go out to Joe's Barbecue and put nickels in the juke box and dance. Joe's Barbecue wasn't even there any more.

"Mike'll phone me at the office tomorrow, I'll bet ten dollars," she thought. Her heart lurched, and a hard ball of excitement rolled itself up tight inside her.

President Pays Tribute To Sam Rayburn

Attends Dinner In Honor Of The Former Speaker

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1—(AP)—Despite an attack of laryngitis, President Truman left the White House Friday night to join in a tribute to Democratic Minority Leader, Sam Rayburn of Texas.

Visit A Surprise

The President made a surprise visit to the Statler Hotel to join in a Texas state society tribute to the former speaker of the house.

In a brief speech, he recalled that in 1943, at the Palace Hotel in San Francisco, "I introduced Mr. Rayburn as the next vice president."

"Think of the trouble I would have saved myself if that had come about," he told the Texas audience.

The President apologized for his husky throat, asserting that he and Mrs. Truman shook hands with about 2,500 people who were White House guests last week.

"About 1,250 of them had the heaves of laryngitis and succeeded in communicating them to me," he said in his humorous, off-the-cuff address.

The President said that Attorney General Tom Clark, a Texan, was at the White House today "working on something he wanted for Texas and told me the Texas society was having this dinner for Sam Rayburn."

Mr. Truman said that he advised Clark that "if the Doc could get me properly blown out, I'd come over and pay my respects to Mr. Rayburn."

Recalling his introduction of Rayburn in 1943, "as the next vice presidency," he declared that Rayburn "is not half as sorry as I am that it didn't come about."

Serious In His Talk

Turning serious, he recalled that Mark Twain's definition of a statesman was a dead politician, and added that Sam Rayburn varied from the rule by being a statesman while still alive.

The President spent only a few minutes at the Texas dinner, where most of the cabinet, Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson and other notables joined in the tribute to Rayburn.

The President recalled that there was a time, during the recent Democratic administration, when Texans virtually ran the government.

They still have a greater share in government than Missouri, he said, smiling.

"Would Have Been A Texan"

If Missouri can't have them, he said that he would just as soon the positions should go to Texans.

"If I were not a Missourian," he continued, "I would have been a Texan," adding that about half of his kinfolk were Texans.

Texans, the President asserted, have made a real contribution to the American government.

"I don't know of a single Texan in congress who is not doing his most for the welfare of the country. That is more than you can say for a lot of Missourians."

The President added that he had been charged with having a "Missouri gang" at the White House and added:

"I'm proud of the Missouri coterie I have with me. They also are making a contribution to the country's welfare."

Reorganization Plan For Mo Pac Denied

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 1—(AP)—A motion to remand the present reorganization plan of the Missouri Pacific railroad to the federal district court in St. Louis, was denied Friday by United States circuit court of appeals here. Court approval of the motion would have meant the ultimate revision of the reorganization plan by the interstate commerce commission.

A court order said the case would remain in its docket for disposition in regular order.

Ten petitions to remand were presented by groups of stockholders and other investors, with arguments in support of six of them presented to the court last Monday. The petitions were taken under advisement by Judge Kimbrough Stone, presiding judge of the eighth circuit here, and Judge Harvey M. Johnsen.

In denying the motions to remand the case, the court ruled that all 10 of the petitions were to remain on the docket.

The petitions and supporting arguments asserted that the "greatly improved" financial condition of the railroad should be taken into consideration as a basis of review of the present plan, which was approved by the St. Louis court January 22, 1946.

Charles W. McConaughy, representing a group of first bond holders, told the court that the Missouri Pacific line and its subsidiaries had been able to retire $55,000,000 of its debts and now had $16,000,000 in "free" cash.

Edison's Old Desk Sealed Over 15 Years to Be Opened

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Feb. 1—(AP)—Thomas Edison's old roll-top desk, sealed for more than 15 years, will be opened next Saturday as a dramatic preliminary to world-wide observance of the great inventor's centennial on Feb. 11.

Former Gov. Charles Edison of New Jersey, son of the inventor, sealed the desk in the inventor's laboratory library in West Orange the day after his father died on Oct. 18, 1931. At the time, the son said he made a cursory check of the desk's contents.

The family intended to open the desk a short time later but for various reasons this was delayed until it was decided to hold off until the 100th anniversary of the birth of Thomas Alva Edison at Milan, O., February 11, 1847.

While the desk is not expected to yield anything of scientific value, its papers and correspondence will be studied for further light on the inventor's personality by his biographers.

A committee formed by 100 world leaders in science, education, industry and public service has been preparing for the centennial anniversary more than a year. The committee is headed by Charles F. Kettering, Detroit research specialist and inventor, and includes the "Edison Pioneers," a dwindling group of men who worked with the "Old Man."

Memorial Be Given Daughter

The day's activities will be highlighted by a ceremony at Milan, where the U. S. Postoffice will present a memorial album of the special Edison commemorative stamp to Mrs. Madeleine Edison Sloane of West Orange, daughter of the inventor.

At the same time, at Menlo Park, N. J., where Edison worked before moving to West Orange, Charles Edison will speak at ceremonies dedicating a plaque at the site of the Edison Tower and Perpetual Light, a replica of the original bulb that was to light the world.

That night, from 7 to 11:30, the sky over New York will be illuminated by six army mobile searchlight units, with a capacity of 100,000,000 candlepower and capable of shooting a beam 12 miles up. The units were developed during the war and their use that night will be their first mass demonstration.

Proclaimed Edison Day

Governors of many states have proclaimed Feb. 11 as Thomas Alva Edison Day. In Congress, a bill has been introduced to designate that date every year in tribute to the "Wizard of Menlo Park."

In perhaps every community in the land, some kind of recognition of Edison's great work will be made on the anniversary. In 30,000 public, private and parochial schools in this country and Canada, students will study sets of posters telling in pictures of the life and achievements of the inventor.

Having a special emphasis this year will be the annual pageant of light at Fort Myers, Fla., where Edison maintained a winter home and a laboratory in which he experimented on the possibility of growing rubber in the continental United States.

As they have done every year since his death, the "Edison Pioneers" will hold their commemorative luncheon at the Hotel Astor in New York. In the evening, the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, New York section, will hold a 1,500-guest dinner at the Waldorf Astoria in cooperation with numerous other professional societies.

Reorganize State Chamber Of Commerce

Go On Record For Adequate Financial Support To Schools

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 1—(AP)—A reorganized state Chamber of Commerce deplored low salaries for teachers Friday and went on record for "adequate financial support" for Missouri schools.

Teachers Leave Class Rooms

A resolution adopted during an all-day meeting noted that teachers "are leaving the classrooms by the thousands because the average weekly wage is only $30, x x x a sum much lower than is paid for even unskilled and semi-skilled labor."

At the same time, it said, enrollments in teacher training courses are declining, "indicating even fewer qualified teachers for the future."

The resolution urged that local Chambers of Commerce promote better school financing and that the state group start a program "to exert continuous leadership for the improvement of education in Missouri."

Allen May, St. Louis insurance executive, was appointed chairman of the Chamber's state education committee.

D. C. McKee of Joplin, vice president of the Empire District Electric Company, told the 300 delegates private power companies would be destroyed if what he called "socialization of electric power" continues.

A Capitalistic Country

"Business faces serious dangers from the socialistic and communistic philosophy abroad and too prevalent in this country," McKee said. "We are a capitalistic country. We have developed on that basis and we cannot be both fish and fowl—we must be one or the other. The time has come in this country when we must present a united front, and stand up and be counted."

McKee said he advocated a strong state Chamber of Commerce because he thought it could be a bulwark and active spokesman for the free enterprise system.

George C. Smith, president of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, said "our nation was built on freedom of enterprise, not on bureaucracy or by groups of 'isms' of the socialistic and communistic type. We must protect private industry from 'isms.'

"We have the moral duty to bring government back to the local community, where we can do something about it."

The state group adopted a new constitution as a start on its plan to revitalize the organization.

Strike Against Kansas City Star Ended

declined to recognize the union as a bargaining agent for the contract carriers. Pressmen and composing room workers refused to cross the line.

The Star management contended that the carriers were not employes but worked under independent contracts.

Confer At Pressmen's Home

Roberts and two other members of the Star's board of directors accepted Berry's invitation to confer with him at Pressmen's Home after the union head said his health prevented him from coming to Kansas City.

The pressmen began walking the picket line last Wednesday after the striking carriers were ordered by court action to cease picketing or attempting to interfere with publication of the newspaper.

The Jackson county circuit court granted 109 non-striking carriers a temporary restraining order against the carriers on strike. A hearing on a permanent injunction was set for February 5.

Local negotiations broke down between management and leaders of the strike after the pressmen appeared on the picket line.

The strike marked the first time in 66 years that the Star failed to publish a paper.

Editorial workers of the Star continued on their jobs all during the strike, and news was written and edited the same as if publication was continuing. The only outlet for distribution of the news, however, was through radio stations.

Stereotypers and engravers refused to recognize the picket line, and held themselves ready for work, but the composing room force failed to enter the plant even after International Typographical Union (AFL) ordered its members to return to their jobs last Tuesday.

Weather Past Month Unusual

By The Associated Press

January was the coldest, hottest, wettest, driest January in America in years, depending on where you lived. And in some spots it was all four.

January was like a capricious woman. She entered like an Amazon—cold and rough. Then she warmed up—a minx. In the middle of her stay she showed a flash of temperament and froze up again—the tease. And then, after a second serene spell, she ended her visit with a tantrum—a shrew.

Every section reported abnormal weather conditions during the month. There were record-breaking highs and unprecedented lows, floods, tornados, sleet, ice, hail, lightning and thunder, rain, fog, and lots of snow.

The first five days of January brought bitter cold and snow to Kansas and Missouri. On Jan. 4, Tarkio, Mo., had 28, the lowest ever recorded in Kansas or Missouri for the month. The end-of-the month warmup, however, brought summery readings, with 74 degrees reported at West Plains, Joplin and Clinton, Mo., and 71 at Chanute, Kans., Jan. 29—before a new storm arrived.

Arkansas temperatures averaged two degrees above normal and Jan. 29's 76 was the highest for the date on record. That night a tornado struck Salem, Ark., causing severe damage.

Oklahoma's weather varied from the new cold records the first of the month to 70-degree weather last week.

In Texas, the first week in January was the coldest in years, and the annual Cotton Bowl game in Dallas on Jan. 1 was played in snow for the first time. The cold wave was followed by a warmup producing temperatures as high as the 90's in the lower Rio Grande valley.

'Bucky' Adams Retires from Mo. Pacific

Popular Boilermaker At Sedalia Shops Has A Colorful Career

Frank A. "Bucky" Adams, 404 East Sixth street, boilermaker at the Missouri Pacific shops, has retired from service. "Bucky," one of the most popular men in his craft, has had a varied career in railroading, working in most of the major shops in the country and Mexico, and was rated as one of the best mechanics in his craft.

His retirement became effective in January.

Frank A. "Bucky" Adams

Began Apprenticeship in 1902

Mr. Adams started his apprenticeship with the Southern Pacific at Tucson, Arizona, in April, 1902. After completing his apprenticeship, Bucky took up the prize fighting game and after a varied career went back to the boiler shop at Little Rock, Arkansas, with the Iron Mountain railroad. From there he went to Pittsburg, Kas., for the Kansas City Southern. After a stay there, he came to Sedalia to work at the new shops of the Missouri Pacific and later was transferred to Little Rock, Ark. From there he went to work for the Illinois Central at Burnside and then to Grand Rapids, Mich., to the PM railroad. The weather there not being suitable to Mr. Adams' taste, he moved to Sparks, Nev., and went to work for the Central Pacific railroad and finished out the year 1906 there.

The urge to travel caused Bucky to try old Mexico, where he went to work for the Central of Mexico at Jammelco. After a short stay he went to work on a contract job at El Paso, Texas, during the summer of 1907. Finding the lure of Mexico still strong, he returned there to the state of Senora at Cananer, for the Green smelter. Later he returned to the states, going to Tuscon, Arizona, for the Southern Pacific, where he worked for over a year. Then back to Old Mexico again for the Grant Construction company that was building a new railroad along the east coast of the Gulf of California. Following the completion of this railroad, Mr. Adams returned to Tuscon for the Southern Pacific.

To Birmingham in 1909

In the spring of 1909 he went to Birmingham, Ala., and went to work for the Southern railroad, where he worked that summer; then to Spencer, North Carolina, for the same road. That winter found him at Vicksburg, Mississippi, working for the Illinois Central for several months. Back to Tuscon, Arizona, where he was working for the Southern Pacific at the time of the strike on September 30, 1911. Of course that called for more traveling, and St. Paul, Minn., Chicago, Ill., and Birmingham, Ala., were points where Mr. Adams worked.

Tiring of railroad work, Bucky joined the United States navy, and after completing a hitch in the service, he again took up railroading in 1915 with the Midland Valley and the Katy railroads. In 1916, Bucky returned to Sedalia for the Missouri Pacific, working at the shops until 1921, when he went to Bloomington, Ill., for the Chicago & Alton, where he worked until 1922. He returned to Tuscon, Ariz., where he worked a month with the Southern Pacific, when the 1922 strike was called. He returned to the Chicago & Alton at Bloomington for a while and then went to Kansas City, where he was employed on a refinery job, which was completed in 1923. He then went to Pittsburg, Kas., and went to work in a contract shop and on October 24, 1924, returned to Sedalia, where he has since been employed with the Missouri Pacific.

Mr. Adams since his return to Sedalia has been active in City and County politics, serving in various offices of the Democrat party. He has also been very active in labor activities and recently completed a term as shop chairman for the boilermakers.

His experience as a professional boxer has caused Mr. Adams to be active in boxing circles, acting as referee, judge and coach for many bouts that have been staged in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams will continue to make their home in Sedalia.

Burlesque Hits Higher Plane

By Jean Meegan
AP Newsfeature Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 1—(AP)—Burlesque, for years the blousy, brash, black sheep of show business, is going elegant.

At least, Eddie Lynch says it is. Eddie, an old timer who is a producer for the eastern burlesque wheel, says succinctly:

"The days of bums bringing in their lunch and taking their shoes off is over."

More explicitly, he boasts: "We play to a general ladies and gentlemen audience. The strippers have graduated from a garter belt to silver fox capes, platform shoes, hat and gloves—and they take 'em off to symphonic music."

His reference to strippers was a slip of the tongue. Those ladies now are referred to as "exotic dancers."

There's been a delicate shift of emphasis from flesh to comedy In the salty slang of the trade Lynch explains:

"We're featuring comics. We book a first and second banana, you know, comics; a 'yes' man (straight man); two strippers and a featured strip, the dame who rides in the pullman."

Hold To House Favorite

Except for the grandes dames of the business such as Georgia Sothern, Lois De Fee, Eleanor Sheridan, Jessica Rogers, Scarlet Kelly, Peaches Strange or Winnie Garrett who "spot" for the two big wheels, eastern and western, most theaters stick to the house favorite, usually a baggy pants comedian, and only import specialty acts.

Boston, usually associated with beans, Back Bay and book bans, is an important stopover on the burlesque circuit. Four houses were running there at the start of the season and two are still flourishing. San Francisco and Los Angeles are the only other cities supporting two burlesque theaters. New York is the only big city where burlesque isn't acceptable. It has been banned on the great white way for several years.

Burlesque business has been off slightly since most of the servicemen were mustered out, according to Billboard. The magazine estimates that a minimum of 750 strippers are working now, plus 150 comics and 75 straight men. Twenty-six theaters belonging to the big wheels are lighted.

There are a number of independent houses, ranging from reputable spots that book from both wheels down to spit-in-the-corner places showing double-feature grade Z pictures for a nickel and featuring one live act. The latter, sometimes termed "scratch houses," hire the floaters or "gypsies" of the profession.

Ex-GI's, "the kids," Lynch says, "who always were a scream in their parlors back home and got up and performed in the army, think they're Bob Hopes now and come around for jobs. They're dead without the radio.

"Burlesque," he claims, "is the only place where anybody can get a chance anymore. It's in a great number of theaters running 52 weeks a year, two and four shows a day."

Kids are broken in on what the performers call the "Burma Road," a derisive tag for Rochester, Dayton, Toledo, and Youngstown. After eight weeks in that boot camp they're supposedly ready for the big league.

Atlantic City is the Valhalla of the business. "A couple of weeks at the Globe," Lynch says, "and you can write your own ticket." The Globe, it seems, has standards: $2:20 top reserved seats, and the comics must wear make-up.

One of the legends which Lynch swears is true is that performers in the last weeks of their 24-week booking send themselves telegrams reading: "Contact me at once," and bearing the name of a rival wheel. The net result of that fiction is a pay boost of $25 a week.

Burlesque is the most imitative of any business in the world.

China's Unrest Pronounced

By James D. White
Associated Press Staff Writer

China today is pregnant with dread.

Overnight, one fifth of humanity could be toppled into the blind slaughter and confusion of civil war.

This is not a new possibility. It has been on the world's mind a number of times in the past 80 years, to say nothing of being on the Chinese mind.

This week, when the United States announced withdrawal of mediation and military forces from China, predictions flew thick and fast that China would forthwith erupt in civil war. A lot of people figured it wouldn't be long until the Chinese would be at each other's throats.

Communist and government armies would fall upon each other, the people would be dragged along behind both war chariots, and Chinese would slay their own brothers up and down their vast and weary land.

That was the prediction.

When Communist forces cut railways near Peiping, it seemed to be coming true. One more busted railway could light the fire, but just how high is the fuel piled?

Since the end of the war with Japan, China's leaders have played with a good many matches which have set small fires, but no general conflagration. If anyone had wanted a big blaze, he could have had it at any time by touching the right fuse.

There were resons against it, which still may be valid.

Strength Undertermined

First of all, no one endures eight years of war and then jumps into more war if he can help it.

Then there are the people. Their bellies are empty and their tempers short after the same eight years of war. Would they go for more?

There are the two sides that would fight. What is their real strength in relation to each other?

No one knows exactly, but debate can be boiled down to this:

The government has a bigger army and better weapons—including planes—but the Communists have an answer that baffled the Japanese who had even more advantage. This answer is guerrill warfare, which chooses its own battlegrounds in a thousand ways that are dark and dangerous.

There is nothing to counter guerrilla warfare except utter terrorism, a hopeless static defense, or more guerrilla warfare.

National armies could not use terror against their own people indefinitely. They have tried static defense. They would be drawing to an inside straight if they tried to wage guerrilla warfare themselves. What they need for that—but cannot count on—is popular support in rural areas. This is absolutely necessary in a country where communications are so poor that armies live off the countryside or die.

China has been kept in turmoil just short of civil war by a wavering balance of these military factors. The American withdrawl hardly improves either side's prospects of knocking out the other. If the balance has been temporarily disturbed, it always trends to restore itself.

There is certain to be some military probing around, some gunjumping by local braves who consider the time right. The boys who tore up the rails near Peiping this week probably were testing government strength in a critical area.

But full scale war?

That's a gamble with death for either side. In spite of recent breast-beating by armor-plated generals, it's very doubtful if either side figures it a sure thing.

Sees No Need of Big Three Meet

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1—(AP)—President Truman today ruled out the possibility of a meeting with Soviet Prime Minister Stalin and British Prime Minister Attlee unless they are willing to come to Washington.

He told a news conference he would be pleased to meet them here any time but he sees no need to leave the United States for such a conference, and, in fact, sees no need for a "Big Three" meeting.

In this, the chief executive appeared to take a position in conflict with the reported views of Stalin. The Russian chief was quoted by Elliott Roosevelt in Look magazine as saying he thought there should be not one but several Big Three meetings and that "they would serve a very useful purpose."

For 'Gas' Tax Hike For Roads

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 1—(AP)—Hugh Stephens, president of the Citizens' Road Association, declared today that Missouri's highways are wearing out and suggested that the state's 2-cent gasoline tax be increased to prevent another bond issue for road purposes.

The Jefferson City banker, former member of the state highway commission, recommended establishment of an officially recognized group of eight or ten "public spirited citizens without financial interest in highway construction or use" to serve as a clearing house for conflicting demands for various kinds of highways and to prepare a dependable statement of available resources and needed changes in the state's road-building program.

He said such a committee should be set up by or with the consent of the general assembly and that the state highway commission should be presented.

"At the risk of drawing criticism I express the feeling that the fly in the ointment of highway planning now is pressure of special interests who conceive it to their advantage to obstruct efforts to raise our low 2-cent gas tax," Stephens said in a statement to a reporter.

Little Big Piney Knocks Em Cold

AP Newsfeatures

BIG PINEY, Wyo., Feb. 1—This cold, little Wyoming mountain town makes the newspapers more often probably than any other small town in the country.

It isn't at all uncommon for stories about weather conditions throughout the nation to include the statement that "the coldest spot in the country was Big Piney, Wyo., with 20 degrees below zero."

Now the Weather Bureau has come up with an explanation of why the 241 residents of this cattle-raising community enjoy the distinction of being the "nation's ice box."

The Weather Bureau blames it on a "cold air drainage" off the mountains lying to the west of the town which is situated in a mountain valley of 6,820 feet altitude.

"Masses of cold air drain off the mountain range into the valley just like streams of water," the Weather Bureau explained.

"There is also an elevation to the east. This enclosure prevents the wind from sweeping out cold air and warming up the valley."

Cold weather is almost a year around proposition. Big Piney had only a 61-day growing season last year, compared with 148 growing days at Cheyenne, some 300 miles to the southeast.

Average Pay By Hotels

Survey Shows It 49 Cents Hour in 58 Hostelries

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 1—(AP)—The hourly earnings of Missouri hotel employes averaged 49 cents an hour, the Bureau of Labor statistics reported today in releasing the results of a survey completed last October in 58 hostelries in the state.

Women earned an average of 46 cents an hour and men earned 52 cents, said the report which also showed that more than half of the establishments had a 48-hour work week. In all but a few of the hotels, the work week was more than 40 hours.

Odis C. Clark, regional wage analyst, said the pay scales represented a substantial increase over 1943, when nearly five out of every six employes received less than 40 cents an hour. In the recent survey only one employe out of four was receiving less than that amount.

Wage scales, the report said, varied widely with the size of the town in which they were located and the size of the hotel. Of the hotels surveyed Kansas City and St. Louis were represented by 10 each; St. Joseph four and Springfield and Joplin by three each. Twenty-eight were in cities of less than 25,000.

In Kansas City and St. Louis, the average wage for men was 6.5 cents an hour more than the state generally, but the wage advantage for women in those cities was only slightly more than two cents an hour.

Classification Given

Employe classifications were room clerks, cashiers, general clerks, elevator operators and bellboys, engineers, firemen, chambermaids and linen room employes.

Leads Officers to Blakeley Body

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., Feb. 1—(AP)—A shallow ditch at a lonely spot along the coast highway to San Francisco today yielding the body of Robert Blakely, 23, of Pico, Calif., slain Jan. 12 in a holdup. The place was pointed out by the alleged killer.

Mitchell A. Johnson, 19, of Duncan, Okla., charged with murdering Blakely, went out with Sheriff John D. Ross and three carloads of deputies and when they came to a cliffside place along highway 101 about 35 miles north of here Johnson said: "I think this is the spot."

About the same time deputies spotted what turned out to be a red and black plaid shirt in the ditch a scant 11 feet off the highway. The decomposed body lay there, screened from the road by brush.

Johnson was brought here by plane today from Duncan where he signed a statement admitting the killing. Sheriff Ross said Johnson told him that he and Richard Fisher, 19, of Lima, O., now held in Carthage, Mo., in a holdup case, accepted a ride with Blakeley, then held him up. The sheriff said Johnson admitted shooting Blakely when the latter grabbed for the gun.

Sheriff Ross also said Johnson told him that he and Fischer participated in a liquor store holdup in Noel, Mo., getting $43, and that he, Johnson, slugged the proprietor.

The sheriff, who also serves as coroner, said a postmortem examination would be made on Blakely's body after which it would be decided whether to hold an inquest. Johnson is held without bail.

Quarantine on Lowry Field

DENVER, Feb. 1—(AP)—Medical officers today rushed inoculation of 14,000 men at the Lowry Field Airbase, under quarantine for respiratory diseases, as new cases were reported.

Col. Robert J. Platt, post surgeon, said 400 active cases were under treatment, and that additional cases had been reported during the day.

He believed that inoculation of the personnel at the big base would be completed within a few hours.

An army cargo plane left Lowry Field late today for Grand Island, Neb., to obtain additional medical supplies, and a truck was sent to Camp Carson, Colorado Springs, for similar items.

Medical officers said 15,000 units of vaccine flown in last night were deemed sufficient for needs.

Medical officers at the post said the illnesses runs a four-day course, beginning with sore muscles, aching joints and dizziness.

Lt. Elbert T. Phelps of Omaha, chief of medicine on the post surgeon's staff, said that although patients have a slight cough, throats and chests remain clear. Nearly all have mild cases of sniffles, he said.

Temperatures during the course of the diseases vary from 101 degrees to 105, and subside on the fourth day. Patients are confined to hospitals for five to 10 days.

Reports of influenza tests, run as a precautionary measure, were not available.

'Warring Tribes' by a River

(Hal Boiyle, who covered fifty foreign countries in four years overseas, has gone alone and unarmed on an exploring trip through darkest Washington, D. C. The first dispatch by "the poor man's philosopher" to reach the outer world follows:)

By Hal Boyle

WASHINGTON, D. C., —(AP)— Here am I in this strange village by a broad flowing river which the friendly natives have named the Potomac, probably after some forgotten chieftain.

The world I knew is very far away. Shall I ever see it again?

In the event some unknown mishap should befall me, I have scrawled these brief notes so that some record may be left to guide future explorers who chance upon this unusual country.

I have discovered no place quite like it in adventurous travels on five continents.

It appears to be inhabited by two warring tribes, one called "Democrats," the other "Republicans." An overwhelming majority of the residents neither till the soil nor fish in the river for their sustenance. Nor do they engage in trade.

They appear to earn their livelihood by obscure labors in huge community stone huts jointly set up by the two great tribes to avoid bloodshed. On warm days, however, many workers seem to prefer to leave the huts and spend the afternoons ruminating in the adjoining parks.

There are also signs that these vast tepees are unhealthful at night. For by 5:30 p. m., they are emptied, the workers fleeing pell mell and swarming aboard public vehicles at the risk of life and limb to escape to the security of the salubrious suburbs.

Glance Into Peril

In this mad race to leave the public building area by dusk men jostle heedlessly past women and children. I must look into this mysterious peril that affrights them.

Food and supplies of wampum to sustain the inhabitants of Washington — a most euphonious name — are shipped in from time to time by outside communities grateful for their efforts.

These contributions do not always, however, appear to be voluntary. Often they are really levies, and one in particular — called the "income tax" — has stirred up considerable resentment among the outlanders.

The battlefield for the two tribes is the interior of one of the largest stone tepees, cunningly designed to segregate the big chiefs, known as "senators" from the more numerous smaller chiefs called "congressmen."

Atop the big dome of the tepee is a bronze statue of an early native hero called "E Pluribus Unum." The "E" probably stands for "Edward" as that is a common name among this people.

The object of each tribe appears to be to get the most "senators" and "congressmen" on the battlefield at one time. The "Republicans" are jubilant because they are leading in both council lodges.

I must now set down an interesting experience that befell me.

Before setting out from Manhattan I inquired of a friend what weapons I should bring along to protect me. My friend is loosely connected with the "Tammyites," which he told me was a powerful subdivision of the "Democrats."

Knowing by history he advised that I carry no arms, credentials or passports except my Missouri birth certificate, because, he explained:

"A Missouri man emigrated to Washington several years ago and has risen pretty high. Look him up."

I have learned since my arrival that this man, Harry Truman, is head chief or "president" over these tribes. I have yet to see him. He has many worries in the white wood hut where he dwells apart.

It appears he is more favored by the "Democrats" than by the "Republicans," who want to set up a new overall chief from their tribe. Ignorant of this factionalism, I proudly showed my birth certificate to a "Republican" to prove I was from the same area that had produced Chief Truman.

"Yuh caught a late boat, did'n yuh, buddy," jeered this tribal partisan.

A queer patois! I must look into it.

(Tomorrow: Tribal government in the joint tepee.)

WASHINGTON, — (AP)— My notebook is full of horror this day.

I have just returned to my camp from a day spent in the great stone tepee where the two main Washington tribes — the "Democrats" and the "Republicans" — hold their councils.

Before describing the weird sacrificial ceremony I saw that has left me shaken with a nameless terror, I must tell something of this council hut.

The elder chieftains of both tribes, the "senators," have private elevators to carry them to the different levels. They also have a miniature railroad train to whisk them underground to a separate building where they can hold pow-wow among themselves or brood alone.

The younger medicine men, the "congressmen," must walk from the great tepee to their marble wigwam.

Both "senators" and "congressmen" are fed in the lower floors of the buildings at regular hours.

Both tribes appear to practice ancester worship. Each has set up statues of its previous chieftains about the community and in the meeting halls, and their hallowed names are often invoked.

This must be a very old civilization indeed—perhaps originally founded by lost Roman seafarers—as some of the early heroes wear garments reminiscent of the Roman toga. Among those sculptured in classic attire is one "George Washington," perhaps a fugitive from the Caesars who found sanctuary here. He is beloved by both tribes.

A later descendant bearing a striking facial resemblance to him is depicted in the garb of the 18th century. He also was named George Washington. Both men are still known as "the father of the country." It is indeed puzzling.

Impressive Ceremony

Now I must relate the harrowing sacrificial ceremony I witnessed after slipping unobserved into a stone dungeon called a "committee room."

August senators from the two tribes were seated in padded chairs behind the sacrificial altar, where the ceremony—known as an "open hearing"—was held.

The victim was led to a table before the senators, who questioned him at length. The man was a sub-sub-chieftain of some kind who labored in one of the huge government huts, and I could not determine the charge against him. Perhaps sacrilegious utterances against the tribal laws—referred to as "political programs."

In any case he was compelled to speak into a machine which magnified his voice to help the senators detect any heresy. From time to time unfeeling natives of the village who sat in the room to observe the sacrifice tittered aloud.

I noted one further method of fiendish torture. A shirt-sleeved policeman wearing a loaded pistol in his holster moved about the room setting glasses of water before the victim and the senators.

As this malicious "Gunga Din" kept refilling the glasses, the senators excused themselves from time to time and returned. But the liquid-logged victim remained throughout the inquisition seated at the table, draining glass after glass.

Two senators quarreled over what the final punishment should be—"the checkoff" or "the closed shop." At least I gather they were discussing the penalty—I have not yet completely deciphered the strange languages of Washington.

Senator Joseph Ball of Minnesota objected to the "closed shop" as unfair, but Senator Claude Pepper of Florida said he was in favor of it and added significantly:

"Qui facit per alium facit per se."

"I know what that means," said the victim, and was led from the room.

Later Senator Pepper assured me that "qui facit per alium facit per se" was just senatorial language for "what one does by another he does himself."

But I still don't know what happened to the victim—whether he was quietly given "the checkoff" or whether he has been locked up forever in "the closed shop."

As I left this weird and unnerving sacrificial room they were dragging a fresh victim to the altar, and "Gunga Din" was standing by with a full water glass. But I had seen enough for one day.

Horn's a Wonder

The rhinoceros has a wonderful horn. It is not made of bone nor horn, but of hair fibers, tightly packed together. One of the longest on record was more than 60 inches in length. The ancients believed the horns of a rhinoceros to have curative powers, and paid fabulous prices for them to grind into medicine.

A Veteran Joins the Legion

Rex, a battle-seasoned war dog, who has the Purple Heart and a citation for bravery, is now a "member" of Pittsburgh's Variety Club Post, American Legion. He's pictured signing up, aided by the new post commander, J. S. Misrach, left, and James G. Balmer, retiring commander.

Reports Given To Ionia Club

The Ionia Homemakers club met at the home of Mrs. Fred Brockman, January 28.

A covered dish luncheon was served at noon.

Mrs. A. W. Hampy, president, presided.

Roll call was answered with "A convenience I hope to add to my home this year."

Mrs. Hampy gave the report on the council meeting and plans were discussed for the year's work. The new books were distributed and filled out and leaders were appointed for projects.

Miss Nan Mahnken read the news letter and Miss Jewell Howe read the health letter.

It was suggested a loan envelope with a leader in charge, would be demonstrated at each club meeting along with the regular project of the month.

Miss Jewell Howe reviewed the article, "Father Flannagan's Toughest Customer," by Fulton Oursler, taken from the Reader's Digest.

After several discussions the meeting adjourned.

The February meeting will be at the home of Mrs. A. W. Hampy, February 25.

Crossroads Comment

Abe Had A Word For It—

Occasionally I receive a Comments suggestion from a Sedalian whose initials are COB. He should have his own column which would be a natural under the title of "Corn Off The COB." By no means are all his comments corny, as evidenced by a story about Abe Lincoln, which he ran across in a trade paper.

Despite opinion that current times are restless, that greed and selfishness seem predominant in the hearts of men, human nature hasn't changed much in the last century. The story about Honest Abe confirms this reasoning:

"A neighbor of Abraham Lincoln's once told the following story: 'I was called to the door one day by the cries of children in the street, and there was Mr. Lincoln, striding by with two of his boys, both of whom were wailing aloud. 'Why, Mr. Lincoln, what's the matter with the boys,' I asked. 'Just what's the matter with the whole world,' Lincoln replied. 'I've got three walnuts, and each boy wants two!'"

Yes, Old Abe had common sense, a rare item. He was right nearly a century ago, and is right today, remarks COB.

Circulation Increases—

Every newspaper has starts, stops and renewals daily. Most newspapers' circulation holds steady. This newspaper's circulation during the war and since its end has been increasing until now it is well above the 12,000 mark. Because of the shortage of newsprint on which papers are printed, many newspapers have had to "freeze" their circulation, in other words refuse to take on new subscribers because not enough paper can be bought to take care of new customers. For newspapers this is a rather disheartening circumstance. Papers like to build up their circulation, and brag about it. So far Sedalia's newspapers have been able to take care of the increased demand for their product, although now the demand is pretty close to reaching the maximum straining point. Yet there is that ever living hope the newsprint shortage may be eased up a bit this year. The circulation manager says he wants to get our figure up to the 13,000 mark. We hope conditions in the newsprint industry permit this to happen.

This increase will not occur, however, if too many subscribers take the position of one in Brownington, Mo., who writes:

"I believe our paper runs out this month. We don't think we will renew. Your paper is all right in a way and another way it tells all the accidents and fires. I don't like to read of them. People shure are getting bad."

* * * *

The Rising Cost of Newsprint—

While shortage of newsprint has become a national problem, newspaper publishers are concerned about the rising cost of this essential product. A 30-ton carload of newsprint received last month by the Sedalia Democrat, only enough for about five weeks consumption, cost $2,580.00, whereas the same amount purchased in 1938 cost $1,560.00, an increase on one carload of $1,020.00.

Why a Woman Has The Last Word—

Most men will agree that thunder in the skies is no less uproarious than the clatter of an angry woman chatterbox. A man may become just as verbally loud as a woman, but somehow her barrage has more telling effect on the male than his counter barrage upon her. There is an obvious reason for this. Men's heavy clothing absorbs the sound waves when a woman raves. Women's light clothing reflects the sound waves when a man rants in reply. Thus man gets a double dose of sound waves—by absorption of those from the woman and his own words bouncing off his wife's clothing. Thus the woman has the last word, always, in a noisy battle.

This analysis will also explain why a woman invariably warns a man to "keep your shirt on," when he starts a word battle. The little woman knows that the more clothing the man keeps on, the better chance she has of besting him in a family argument.

* * * *

Civilized people spend much time planning and executing retaliation upon others because of actual or fancied wrongs. Natives in the Congo work off this emotional excess saying a prayer for revenge by driving nails into a wooden statue and letting it go at that. Perhaps it would be a good idea for us to borrow this heathen practice and erect a few wooden statues on the Pettis County Court House lawn and inaugurate a monthly nail-driving festival. Thereafter the civil docket might not be over-crowded.

* * * *

The Relativity of Invasions—

Americans have considerable difficulty understanding why the Russian people are such a suspicious lot. We, over here, are supposed to have good intentions toward the U.S.S.R.; we think we are honest and cannot conceive of others thinking we have designs on their property.

Louis J. Alber, world traveler, speaking before Sedalia Kiwanis, brought up a point about Russian suspicions of other nations and neighbors. Since 1800, Russia, periodically, has been invaded by 14 armies. Devastation and destruction of life and property cannot be described as enormous, it has been incalculable.. What sort of effect do such conditions have upon the mind of a people? They develop an obsession for security and part of the defense mechanism set up to obtain security is mental suspicion of everyone else's motives.

Forty years ago Sedalia youngsters used to invade the territory along Flat Creek and Muddy on Saturdays to go swimming or otherwise find recreation in the great out-of-doors. It was innocent pastime for the majority. Many times, however, youngsters would encroach upon a farmer's watermelon patch or fruit orchard.

Once a group of us left an isolated swimming hole, going far back in a field to get rich dirt to rub all over our wet naked bodies and form a black-looking mud pack. Our intention was then to rush down upon our other playmates and "scare them to death."

However the particular field we entered happened to be a melon patch. We had no intention of "swiping" a melon, but the farmer-owner of the land must have had some previous bad experiences with boys, and suspected our motives. He charged at us, ordering us off the place. Did we run? Of course we did! We were the ones scared to death.

After 40 years it comes to me now, that here was a story of an American whose land had been invaded by melon-swiping boys so often that the farmer came to be suspicious of the motives of all boys found either in his melon patch or far away on the creek. bank. So he had to watch all the boys who came around, even though a small percentage were after his fruit.

With their suspicions, maybe the too-often invaded Russians are a good bit like us Americans after all.

20-Year Sentence For Young Mother

CHICAGO, Feb. 1—(AP)—A tearful 37-year-old mother today was sentenced to one to 20 years in prison after an Oklahoma man testified she had lured him into an alley where he was robbed of $1,700 by four men.

Frank Collins, 43, of Bethany, Okla., testified he met Mrs. Ester Giachini of Chicago in a tavern and accompanied her to another tavern where he said she talked to Nick Roppo, 30, Chicago.

Collins said when he left the tavern with the woman, he was robbed in an alley by Roppo and three other men.

Roppo yesterday was sentenced to three concurrent one-to-20 year terms for the robbery and two others.

Mrs. Giachini told the court Roppo had "ordered' her to walk out of the tavern with Collins, but Roppo testified he had given her $25 as a "cut."

Criminal Court Judge William J. Lindsay told the woman the probation department would arrange care for her 15-year-old son.

According to American Iron and Steel Institute estimates, the automotive industry received a fourth of total sheet and strip steel shipped in the first seven months of 1946.

'Pre-Apprentice School'

Cleveland Solves Lack of Skilled Building Labor; NHA Advises Others 'Do Likewise'

Navy veteran Norman C. Nusser, 22, a deft man with a hawk and trowel. Since graduation from pre-apprentice school last October, he has worked on four houses and two larger buildings.

By John O. Gunn
NEA Staff Correspondent

CLEVELAND (NEA)—With the cooperation of both employers and labor unions, this city is making a frontal attack upon the new Public Enemy No. 1 of home construction, the shortage of skilled building labor.

So quietly that not everybody has noticed the change, housing materials have been coming back. Though still far from plentiful, they have ceased to be the prime bottleneck that is stymieing the building of millions of badly needed homes. Experts estimate that even now it would require from 250,000 to 400,000 more workers than are available to handle the 1947 materials supply satisfactorily.

Cleveland does not claim to have solved this problem. It has made an attempt so promising that John C. Davis, director of the NHA's construction labor division, says "Cleveland has the answer," and has gathered information to pass on to other communities with a "Go thou, and do likewise' 'exhortation.

A feature of the Cleveland Plan that intrigues building experts from other communities is that it has been started in the plastering field, which has been regarded as one of the tightest and most unfriendly to training programs in the whole building industry.

The building trades have been losing skilled workmen steadily for some 16 years now. Today there are in training only about 100,000 apprentices, who are not enough to even replace the over-65-year journeymen who will be stepping out before long. Yet the need is the greatest in national history.

Foreseeing the situation last summer, Clevelanders asked the Board of Education to install a pre-apprenticeship course for plasterers in the Trade School. The Board agreed. The plasterer's apprenticeship committee, representing both employers and union, prepared plans; state and federal governments agreed to contribute to the costs; and the courses were opened.

In most cities a young man who thinks he wants to become a plasterer is hired, cold, by a contractor, to whom he is indentured for a four-year apprenticeship. The employer has to pull one of his too few journeymen off production to teach the novice. If the apprentice lacks aptitude, or loses interest, and quits ,or is fired, the employer is stuck. That is one reason why builders have been backward about fostering apprenticing.

Here the candidate is enrolled in the pre-apprenticeship course taught by a retired journeyman. This covers only fundamentals. Some men get through in five days, some take three weeks. They get no pay. But as soon as they have learned to handle the hawk and trowel and the darby, to put plaster on a wall so that it will stay, they are sent to a contractor for regular apprenticeship. Thereafter they must report back to the school one eight-hour day every two weeks until they become journeymen.

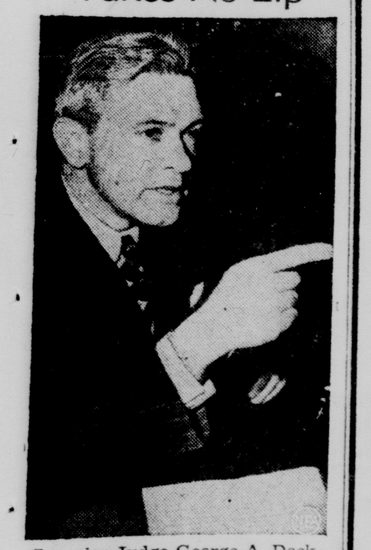

About 35 out of every 100 men who think they want to be plasterers are weeded out in the precourse. The rest are not indentured to individual contractors direct, so that they are stuck if they get hold of a thoughtless, selfish or incapable boss. They are indentured to the joint committee, which can take an apprentice away from any employer who fails to give him the varied training that he needs.

This training approach has been accompanied by another recognition of the desperate state which the building trades labor market is reaching: Both the plastering industry and the unions have relaxed and liberalized their rules.

Before the war only men in the 18-to-21 year age group were accepted for apprentice training. Now the maximum age has been raised to 25 years. And for ex-service men this limit is lifted by subtracting years-in-service from an applicant's age.

Thus far the pre-apprenticeship training plan has been limited, here, to plasterers. Lansing, Mich., has inaugurated a similar program for bricklayers. There is no apparent reason why it can not be extended to cover carpenters, painters, masons, building electricians, plumbers, steamfitters, welders, riviters.

Takes No Lip

Superior Judge George A. Dockweiler, of Los Angeles, is pictured in his study, where he indicated that he would take no lip from Leo ("Lippy") Durocher over his handling of the Brooklyn Dodgers manager's marital mix-up with actress Laraine Day. Judge admitted he would study Durocher's recent squawk for possible contempt of court action, but said it was "probably beneath notice."

Lengthy Roll Call

More than five weeks were required for the 204 roll calls of the U. S. House of Representatives, made during the last session of the 74th Congress. Only eight members of the House were present at every roll call.

Kaiser Wilhelm II and Adolf Hitler both aspired to be artists. Some of the Kaiser's paintings were reproduced on post cards, and Hitler's sketches were exhibited after his rise to power.

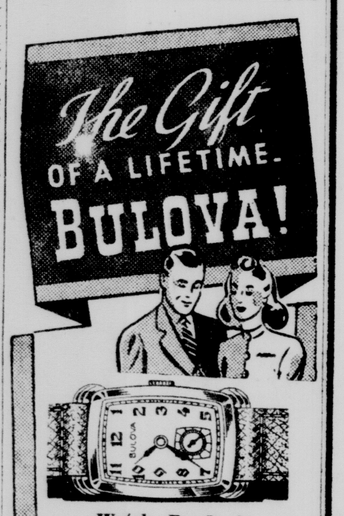

The world's largest calculating machine—the "mechanical brain" developed at Harvard—is a steel and bakelite structure containing more than a million feet of wiring.

Infant Son Saved In China Crash

SHANGHAI, Feb. 1—(AP)—An American missionary's desperate leap from a flaming airliner with his infant son saved the baby's life, but the father and all the other 24 persons aboard were killed, witnesses reported today.

The lone survivor, 16-months-old Paul Vick of Rochester, N. Y., was brought to a Shanghai hospital from the scene of Tuesday's crash 95 miles southwest of Hankow. He suffered a broken leg but his recovery was reported assured.

Paul's parents, the Rev. and Mrs. R. A. Vick, and his older brother were among the victims. Others of the 11 Americans and Canadians who died in the cash of th Chinese National Aviation Corp. liner included Methodist Bishop Schuyler Edward Garth and his wife, of Madison, Wis.

The harrowing story of the disaster was related by W. Robert Taylor of Granville, Ohio, treasurer of the American Baptist Mission of Shanghai, who took charge of Paul.

Seven or eight persons jumped from the plane.

Of those who leaped, only Vick and his son were found alive. The father died 40 hours later.

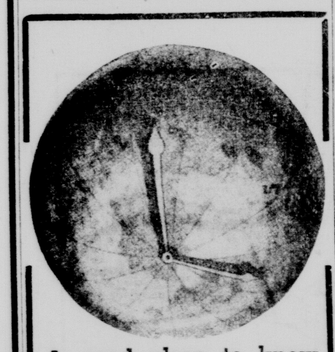

"He sent me a message asking that the baby be sent to his (Vick's) parents in America," Taylor said.

In the hospital today, the baby appeared cheerful, and Taylor remarked, "he's certainly a miracle baby if ever there was one."

Fire One Million And Save $3,500,000,000

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1—(AP)—Firing of 1,000,000 of the government's 2,300,000 civilian employes, at an annual saving of $3,500,000,000, was proposed formally by Rep. Taber (R-NY) Friday to the senate-house budget committee.

Chairman Knutson (R-Minn) of the house ways and means committee said "it was the general feeling" of the budget group, which is to set a ceiling of federal spending, that government personnel can be cut by Taber's figure. The "firing" would be accomplished by cutting off appropriations for salaries of the 1,000,000 employes.

Taber, chairman of the budget committee, disclosed there was disagreement at the meeting, as to whether it was practical to cut off 1,000,000 employes. He said some committee members maintained such a cut would injure government functions.

Knutson said he did not think so.

LISTEN! by Jim Carson

ON OUR MYTHICAL WINTER CRUISE through the Caribbean, we put in our good ship, Flossie, at the good port of Kingston on the Jamacia. We take time only to read what June Martin has written in our weekly column, and then we're on our carefree way.

★ ★ ★

Top of the Morning

YOU WONDER about our work? My, I hardly know where to begin! But maybe I can give you a brief resume of a typical day, and that'll give you an idea of what we do.

At 6 o'clock (that's in the morning, mind you!... and you know how I hate to get up early)... well, anyhow, at 6 o'clock my alarm goes off and my day starts. After much scurrying around, I'm ready to leave home, in time to get down to the market (that's the fresh fruit and vegetable terminal here in Kansas City) by 7 o'clock, generally, or a few mintues after. Then I scoot around to the various market stalls... some 35 or so, and I ask each market man... "What have you got today? How does the market look to you? What's plentiful? What's cheap? What items are more scarce?" etc. By then it's 8 o'clock and time for our program rehearsal.

June Martin

Then "Happy Kitchen"

YOU SEE, part of the script for the "Food Scout" program is written ahead of time, and the rest of it is ad libbed from the facts which I picked up when I was talking to the market men. Well, Jay Butler or Harry Douglas (Jay and Harry are our announcers) rehearse for 15 minutes, and at a quarter after eight, we're on. At 8:25 we're off! That's radio for you... on and off all the time. Then we dash out of the market, jump into a car and drive back to the station.

At 8:45 Harry or Jay and I start rehearsing for our nine-fifteen program. This one is called the "Happy Kitchen," and it runs for 15 minutes. As you probably know, it's a program of practical hints for the homemaker and gives recipes in dialogue with the announcer. By the way—it's been completely written ahead of time.

Then It's Work

AFTER THE PROGRAMS (and here I should explain that they are both on Monday through Saturday)... well, after the programs are over, I'm back in my office, and our day really starts in earnest! Margaret Smith is there (she's my "gal Friday"), and we generally talk over the two programs that have just been given. It's grand to get Margaret's slant on things for she listens (as she says) "with both ears wide open"... and her comments are most helpful.

Well, we've analyzed the programs... and then we're ready to start writing for the next day. I dictate, and Margaret pounds it out on her trusty little typewriter. With good luck, both scripts are finished generally by 1 o'clock, and we feel slightly finished by that time, too! So, out we dash to lunch, and come back feeling fit-as-two-fiddles, because-of-our-vittles. (OH, oh, I have to watch myself, I'm becoming a poet... that's what this radio business does to one).

Answering Mail

THEN IN THE AFTERNOON, we answer mail questions, read government releases, get our recipes ready for our files, get caught up on our correspondence, meditate on what we're going to do the next day, talk to our sponsors, do our reports and generally find to our horror, that it's 5 o'clock... the day is gone... and there are still a million and one things we wanted to do. That's the way time flies by in the "Happy Kitchen."

This started out to be a brief resume, but it looks more like a book. But what's this? Good heavens! Margaret just fainted from this extra-curricular activity... so pardon me while I dash out for water to bring her back, so we can get ONWARD, EVER ONWARD, WITH THE SCRIPTS. And so until Monday then, goodbye everybody!

Hitler's Photographer Given Prison Term

MUNICH, Feb. 1—(AP)—Heinrich Hoffman, who made a fortune taking pictures of Adolf Hitler, and Hans Fritzsche, broadcaster, were given long terms in prison and deprived of their wealth Friday by German de-Nazification courts here and at Nuernberg.

Hoffman 63, who testified to the amassing of a $300,000 fortune as the official photographer of Hitler and the Nazi party was sentenced to 10 years at hard labor after a four-hour hearing here in the cold, bare palace of justice where Elite Guards once snapped to attention when he went by.

Fritzsche, one of the three Nazis acquitted in the Nuernberg trial of Hermann Goering and associates, was sentenced to nine years after a five-day trial.

Return Some of War Dead Next August

Those From Pearl Harbor to San Francisco Port

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 1.—Col. Michael A. Quinn, commanding officer of the Kansas City Quartermaster depot, announces that the preliminary operational schedules for the return and final burial of World War II dead, prepared by the office of the quartermaster general, contemplates that those who fell at Pearl Harbor and other armed forces personnel who now rest in seven cemeteries in Hawaii will reach the San Francisco port of embarkation about August 18. Those who are buried in the Henry Chapelle temporary cemetery in Belgium are scheduled to arrive at New York about August 25.

Only the remains of those whose return is requested by next of kin will be brought back to the United States for final burial in either a private cemetery or a national cemetery, Major General T. B. Larkin, the quartermaster general of the army, said in announcing the tentative schedule.

Casket Deliveries in May

The schedule is based on the assumption that present casket manufacturing requirements will be met, that full-scale deliveries of caskets will begin in May, 1947, and that deliveries will continue without interruption until all orders have been filled. Current estimates are that 80 per cent of the recovered remains will be returned to the United States or the homeland of the deceased and that 20 per cent will be interred permanently overseas. The accuracy of these estimates will not be known, however, until all next of kin have responded to letters of inquiry which are to be mailed by the office of the quartermaster general.

Colonel Quinn also announced that each deceased veteran passing through the distribution center at the Kansas City quartermaster depot will be covered by an American flag during the homeward journey. At the present time the Philadelphia quartermaster depot is employing 90 women who are turning out the largest single order of American interment flags in the nation's history.

At the Philadelphia quartermaster depot expert seamstresses are hard at work on an assignment that calls for the production of 169,000 additional copies of the stars and stripes, which are to be used to drape the caskets of fallen heroes of World War II.

The interment flags, made of high-grade mercerized cotton, duplicate in size the regulation United States storm flag which floats over American military posts, camps and stations, government buildings, and American embassies all over the world. The flag is five feet wide, nine feet five inches long. All of the stripes of the flag and the stars of the field are individually sewn.

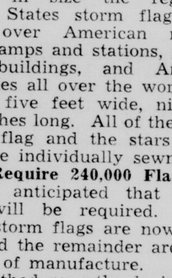

Will Require 240,000 Flags

It is anticipated that 240,000 flags will be required. About 70,000 storm flags are now available and the remainder are under process of manufacture.

A method recently devised will increase production from 225 to 600 completed flags per day. Heretofore, stripes were cut to individual requirement lengths and then sewn together on high-speed sewing machines. An ingenious technician found that if several yards of strippings were sewn at a time and later cut to length, production could be greatly increased.

Punching machines cut star figures from the blue field. A white star is placed over and one is placed under each cut-out and sewn in. The star on the reverse side is cut to oversize dimensions to facilitate handling and after sewing it is trimmed down to size by hand. Now the technicians are working on a short-cut method for placing the stars.

To complete the interment flags will require 586,701 yards of scarlet cloth, 500,231 yards of white cloth and 213,047 yards of blue cloth.

Seeds of Good Will were sent to the Brethren Service, Nappanee, Indiana, for shipment to European countries, where they are now planning their Victory gardens. These seeds will be distributed by religious agencies on the basis of need, without regard to creed or political ideas.

Sedalia troops contributing to this International project are: Troop 15, Mark Twain school, Mrs. F. J. Summers, leader; Troop 17, Smith-Cotton, Mrs. E. T. Dillard, leader; seeds will be sent to Norway by choice of the girls in these troops: Troop 12, Smith-Cotton, Mrs. P. Cecil Owen, leader; seeds to Greece, Troop 56, Broadway, Mrs. T. B. Johnson, leader; Troop 27, Horace Mann, Mrs. Ralph Carrell, leader, seeds to Belgium. Troop 21, Sacred Heart, Mrs. E. M. Francke, leader, seeds to Czechoslovakia. Troop 26, Broadway, Mrs. J. E. Merrick, leader, Troop 28, Washington school, Mrs. W. A. Korando, leader, seeds to Holland.

Troop 28, Washington school, contributed two scrap books to the Girl Scout Treasure chest at Bothwell hospital this week. Mrs. Korando and Mrs. Leonard Dowdy are the leaders.

Blazing Heat at Lofty Height

Torrid Zone Aloft Above Real Frigid Atmosphere

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1 — (AP) — Layers of blazing heat have been found in the frigid upper atmosphere, scientists announced tonight.

Up to now it had been assumed that above seven miles, the temperature remained constant at 67 degrees below zero fahrenheit.

But thermometers in rockets have disclosed a torrid zone with heat of 170 degrees between the 30 and 40-mile mark.

From 40 to 50 miles, the air grows colder again, the temperature probably dropping as low as 150 below zero. The thermometers there registered 80 below.

Then from 50 to 75 miles occurs another torrid zone where the rocket thermometer recorded 212 degrees and the scientists calculated the maximum probably is 638 degrees.

Beyond 75 miles is a question mark. That is as high as investigations have been made, but research is being continued to extend their range.

These discoveries were announced by the national advisory committee for aeronautics, causing it to supplement its standard atmosphere data officially adopted in 1925.

"These new findings," its statement said, "will make necessary new design and construction techniques to permit aircraft operation in these torrid zones."

But that is something for the future. Planes thus far have not operated much beyond ten miles high.

The new data was obtained by thermometers in V-2 rockets launched at White Sands, N. M. Officials said the findings confirm new theories that there are layers of hot and cold air above the earth which remain in permanent position, never fluctuating widely in altitude, although they may become hotter or colder with the seasons.

The National Advisory Committee for aeronautics is an official government research agency. It assigned a subcommittee last April to prepare a new "standard" chart of the air to supplement the 1925 chart. The old one showed the atmosphere from sea level only to 65,000 feet.

DECORATION DAY A LONG TIME AWAY?

It isn't if you desire to have a Monument or Marker erected by then.

The eight weeks preceeding May 30th are our busiest of the year, and some orders placed late cannot be completed by that time.

Be wise and place your order with the Heynen Monument Co., now. Let them have the time to give it the careful attention it needs to make a beautiful and lasting tribute to a loved one.

Select a memorial this month from the Heynan Monument Co., Ohio and Pacific St., and be assured that it will be erected before Decoration Day.

Helen G. Steele Music Club Has Annual Evening Meeting Wednesday

One of the most colorful meetings of the year of the Helen G. Steele Music club was the supper meeting held Wednesday evening at the Heard Memorial club house. This once a year night meeting was prepared especially for busy women who are unable to attend the daytime programs.

Huckleberry branches were entwined around the crystal candle holders in which were tall white lighted tapers and bright colored programs, with silhouettes of sailing boats or girls skiing, were at each place.

The entire evening was planned by a committee composed of Miss Marguerite O'Connell, chairman, Mrs. Bryan Howe and Mrs. William C. Griffiths.

Invocation was given by Mrs. Everett White.

Mrs. T. E. Gasperson led the group singing with Miss Lillian Fox at the piano.

Announcements were made of the Symphony and of the "Frolic" which will be presented at the next meeting on February 12.

The program, which was repeated for the second time this year by request, was taken from the operetta, "The Song of Norway." It is based on the life of Edward Grieg and his compositions were used throughout. Grieg, who was born and reared in Norway, wrote during the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries and interpreted, through his music, the life and traditions of Norway.

Mrs. John M. Rodeman and Mrs. Arthur Klang were co-chairmen of the program which follows:

The Legend of Norway — Mrs. Klang.

Two Piano-Concerto in A Minor—First movement, Mrs. H. C. Salveter; Mrs. Raymond Peterson.

Long and Hard Road Out of An Iron Lung

Morale is Built Up Best When Having Associates

By Eleanor Griesemer

BALTIMORE, Feb. 1 —(AP)— If you're traveling the long, hard road towards working your way out of an iron lung, you don't travel fastest by traveling alone.

That's the unanimous opinion of the eight iron lung infantile paralysis victims at Children's Hospital school who make up the only respirator unit in the country.

Maybe it's the morale boost—the competitive spirit to see who can stay out of his lung the longest," Mrs. Everbertha Gibson, one of the patients, explains. "Somehow, after being here a few weeks you find you can do without the respirator for longer and longer periods of time."

Mrs. Gibson was stricken with polio a year and a half ago in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. When she came here last fall, shortly after the unit opened, she could stay out of the lung only a few hours at a time. Now she can stay out eight consecutive days.

"Next time it will be nine days and then longer," she said, "because I don't want to spend one minute more than necessary away from my two youngsters."

To Build Up Muscles

Dr. George E. Bennett, director of the hospital, explains it this way:

"Morale plays an important part in rehabilitating respirator patients. As soon as they overcome their fear of being out of the iron lungs, they've made a first step toward re-educating their muscles and learning how to use accessory muscles so they can breath independently.

This type of physiotherapy is a new approach to the long-term respirator cases. The center is still in an early stage of development, but Bennett says "it ought to set a national pattern."

The center was set up last August with a $25,000 grant from the Maryland branch of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Since then, patients have come in mobile units by plane and overland from as far as Florida. All have the same goal—to throw off the "crutch" which makes it almost impossible for them to live at home.

Diaphragm muscles of respirator cases are so paralyzed they cannot breath without artificial aid—unless they are taught to use the 15 thoracic (chest) muscles to help relieve the burden on the diaphragm, Bennett says.

Victims of acute polio may be in respirators only a matter of weeks. Others, with more permanent damage, spend months in them, dependent on highly specialized mental and physical therapy to recover.

Patients Scattered

Usually these patients are scattered over the country in hospitals which are not equipped to give them either the special care or the "lift" of being with other patients similarly afflicted.

Hope Wolley was a junior at Elmira college in Ithaca, N. Y., two and a half years ago, when the Polio virus struck. She came here last October, able to stay out of a respoirator only two and a half minutes at a time. She can stay out 14 minutes now and is talking about when she'll be out for good.

Dr. Bennett estimates costs are cut almost in half by putting the patients in one unit. Ordinarily, individual care costs about $750 a month.

Besides the care these eight patients are getting, the center for the first time makes it possible to conduct research on a combined group of patients.

"The psychological as well as the physical results of confinement within the lung can be studied by a staff of trained psychiatrists, orthopedic specialists and neurologists," Bennett said.

"It's something about the afmosphere of the place—being able to wheel over and talk to a fellow patient — plus wonderful food," says Ruth Hettinger of Baltimore.

"I've been in a lung over a year. When I came here in September I could stay out seven days. Now it's 13. The encouraging part is to see the progress others make."

The two youngest patients are Janet Gentle, 15, a new comer who travelend 900 miles from Rockwood, Ala. in her mobile lung unit, and Daphne Schreiber, 15, who flew from West Palm Beach, Fla. Daphne could stay out of the lung a few minutes when she arrived. Now she is independent for three and a half days, and Janet is working to catch up.

Arthur Gross, a Baltimore Negro, could stay out of the respirator two days at a time when he arrived here last fall. He expects to go home sometime this month—and he's leaving the artificial lung behind.

Sorosis Program On Switzerland

"The Art and Beauty of Switzerland" is the subject of the talk to be given at the Sorosis club meeting Monday afternoon at Heard Memorial club house by Mrs. Elvina Zurcher Gumto.

Mrs. Gumto did not gather her information of this beautiful country through books nor even as a traveler. Switzerland is her native land. She was born in Biel, the daughter of a Swiss watchmaker, and as a little girl she often sat on his bench while he worked, watching him. She even thought she, too, might someday be a watchmaker. At the age of 16 she went to Paris, France, with a family as a governess. She speaks both French and German.

In 1893 she came to the United States and has made seven trips back to her native land. She hopes to go again. She has lived in Sedalia for the past three years at 700 West Third street and has been a member of Sorosis for two years.

Mrs. Gumto is a very worldly-minded person and as she tells of her beloved Switzerland she will show slides illustrating her talk.

Mrs. P. Cecil Owen, of the Art and Drama department, is program chairman.

Legion Auxiliary To Meet Monday

The American Legion Auxiliary Unit to Post 16 will have its regular meeting and initiation Monday night at 8 o'clock at Parish Hall. The meeting will be presided over by Mrs. Alice B. White, president.

A special program of music has been planned.

Rev. L. A. Swan, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran church, will address the group. He will speak on "Americanism."

A social hour will follow the regular meeting.

Tigers Beat Jeff City In C. M. C. Game

Tigers Hold Lead Throughout Game Score Was 55-40

Smith-Cotton chalked another victory up Friday, after they had defeated the Jefferson City Jays in thrill-packed, fast-moving conference game by a score of 55 to 40. In the "B" team game that preceded the varsity game Smith-Cotton's second string men carried their school to victory defeating their opponents 25 to 24 in another fast action game.

During the game the spectators were careful in predicting any decision of who would win. The game kept everyone guessing. Though Smith-Cotton lead throughout, Jeff City would creep within one or two points of tying them, and the Bengals had a hard time keeping a safe edge over their opposing aggregation.

Tigers Keep Jays on Toes

With excellence the keynote of their offensive playing, Smith-Cotton carried the game with many fine plays, that kept the Jays on their toes at all times.

Thomas, Tiger guard, scored eight baskets and made five free throws to account for twenty-one of the Sedalia points. Miller earned fourteen and Egbert twelve. These three made the majority of the points alone, but without the aid of their team-mates, half of them wouldn't have been scored.

A slow start didn't discourage either team nor did it put a curb on their efforts to outscore the other.

Twelve points were made in the first quarter by Sedalia and ten by the Jays. Picking up in the second they came around to advance fifteen more, while Jeff City loitered behind with eleven. Third quarter found Sedalia with only a slight lead, the score being 39 to 32, but the twelve points they did earn against the eleven of the Jays still kept them in a safe position. In the last stanza nothing seemed to quench the Tigers thirst for more points. Basket after basket was made by Smith-Cotton, and when the game at last ended a tally showed that the Sedalia team had made sixteen points to the Jay's eight.

After each basket was made the band offered their moral support by playing, "Sedville Will Shine Tonight". During the half, Mary Neizert, junior at Smith-Cotton, entertained the audience with baton twirling.

Conference Game Friday

Sedalia's next conference game is scheduled for next Friday night, when they will meet the yet to be defeated, Hannibal team. The game will be played in the Smith-Cotton gym.

St. Louis Glovers To Start Monday

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 1—(AP)—Ambitious young boxers from eastern Missouri and two nearby Illinois cities, winners of their hometown tournaments, began arriving today for the annual St. Louis Golden Gloves tournament which produced three national champions a year ago.

Three rings have been set up at the Arena for the slugfest opening Monday night. The eliminations will continue Tuesday and Wednesday nights and the finals will be held Friday night.

A record number of about 200 hopefuls are entered from Hannibal, Moberly, Herculaneum, the Lead Belt, St. Genevieve, Cape Girardeau, Poplar Bluff, and Lilbourn in Missouri, and Quincy and East St. Louis, Ill. The large number of St. Louisians who are qualified for the event include 43 from the South Broadway Athletic club, winner of the team championship for the past three years.

Medical examinations and weighing-in ceremonies will be held tomorrow at the Globe-Democrat building. The newspaper sponsors the tournament.

C. C. Hubbard High Beats Columbia

In the hardest fought basketball game ever to be played on the C. C. Hubbard high school court, the Hubbard high "Tigers" defeated the Columbia team by a final score of 38 to 31.

In the first quarter, the Columbia team led by 8 points with the score 12 to 4 at the end of the first quarter. The "Tigers" held Columbia scoreless in the second quarter and picked up 6 points, with the score 12 to 10. In the third quarter the Tigers pulled away leading at the end with 26 to 21 and holding the lead throughout the rest of the game.

For the victors, Harris captured high point honors with 8 points with Stevenson running a close second with 7. For Columbia Bennett and Wright tied for honors with 8 points apiece.

Next Thursday the Hubbard team will meet the Springfield team on the Hubbard court.

Stevens and Munchief Sign Brown Contracts

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 1—(AP)—First baseman Chuck Stevens and pitcher Bob Muncrief of the St. Louis Browns have signed their 1947 contracts, the club announced tonight.

Stevens, 28, a brilliant fielder who erred only six times in 1,112 chances for a .995 mark last season, lives at Long Beach, Calif. He hit .248 last year.

The 31-year-old Muncrief, a mound mainstay in the Brownies' successful campaign for the 1944 penant, had an off year in 1946, winning only three games while losing 12. His home is at Dallas, Tex.

Greenberg's Salary Equal That of Fellers

NEW YORK, Feb. 1—(AP)—Hank Greenberg's salary for 1947 may be as high as $80,000, or as much as Bobby Feller, Cleveland's ace hurler, stands to get it was learned today following a two-hour conference between the newly acquired Pittsburgh slugger and Roy Hamey, general manager of the Pirates.

Declaring that no contract was discussed in his talk with Hamey, Greenberg said he was awaiting the arrival of President Frank McKinney from Miami Beach, Fla., before opening negotiations with the Pirates in Pittsburgh early next week.

Although Hamey insisted no contract had been offered the major league's home run king, he said in an interview after the confab that the Pirates were willing to go as high as $60,000 as a basic salary and probably would tack some bonus clauses on the document. These would be based on attendance figures which would give Hang a chance to earn more money.

Demaret Leads In The Tucson Open

TUSON, Ariz., Feb. 1—(AP)—Defending champion Jimmy Demaret of Houston, Tex., ringing up his second consecutive 66, went into the lead for the 72-hole $10,000 Tucson open golf tournament today with a three-round total of 199.

He had a 67 on opening day.

Demaret's consistent performance enabled him to supplant the half-way pace-setter, Herman Keiser of Akron, Ohio, whose game blew up today.

Keiser, who set a new course record—an eight-under-par 62—and equalled the national mark held by many others, had a 37-35—72 for his third round, gicing him a total of 201.

The Akron entry's game was bad from tee to green. He three-putted one.

Moving up also was the tournament's favorite, PGA champion Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa., who blasted the flat, easy 6,400-yard El Rio course for a 65 and a three-round score of 200 even.

Joint Major League Plan On Pensions

Players, Trainers, And Coaches to Get $50-$75 Per Month

By Jack Hand

NEW YORK, Feb. 1—(AP)—Baseball adopted a far-reaching pension plan today in unprecedented joint major league action by which players, coaches and trainers will receive from $50 to $100 monthly for life after the age of 50 if they spent at least five years in the big leagues.

Fulfillment of this retirement cheme, an outgrowth of last year's player committee meetings, depends on participation by at least 75 per cent of all major league athletes, at least 60 per cent of any club's eligible players must belong if any are to participate in the plan.

Players Who Are Eligible

All players on the roster of major league clubs on opening day 1947 will be eligible for membership by a series of annual payments ranging fram $45.45 in the first year to $454.75 in the tenth year. Ofter the player has paid in $2,500 his yearly premium would be $250.

Each major league club would pay $250 for each participating player and the remaining costs would be provided by the net receipts of the annual All-Star game and the sale of radio rights to the world series. If there should be a deficit, the 16 clubs would make up the difference. At the present time the commissioner's office is holding in escrow $352,000 for the start of the fund.

Under a graduated scale, a retired player who has five years service would receive $50 monthly for life at the age of 50. For each additional year, the pension would be increased $10 monthly until it reached a $100 maximum.

A Complicated Plan

Details of the plan, called the "most complicated pension system ever adopted," call for similar payments to beneficiaries over a 120 month period if the player should die before collecting.

Time spent by the athletes in the armed service also shall be counted in figuring their years of big league play, provided three of his five years qualifying service covered actual play on a major league team.

Although the pension plan was the outstanding development of the joint session, the big leaguers did guarantee a $250,000 player pool for all subsequent world series.

Versailles Wins Over Windsor

The Windsor basketball team was defeated by the strong Versailles cagers Wednesday night by a score of 59 to 49.

During the entire first half the Windsor team led the aggressors by ten points. They seemed to be out playing and out fighting their strong opponents. This proved true until the middle of the third quarter, at which time Windsor began to tire and the Versailles quintet swept past them to take the lead, and to win by ten points.

Heineman accounted for fourteen of the twenty points scored by Versailles in the first half. Campbell and Frisbie scored all of the Versailles points in the second half to supply their team with the winning points.

Next week the Tipton five will face the Versailles team at Versailles. This also promises to be another of the unpredictable games Versailles has been playing.

Sport Scraps

By D. KELLY SCRUTON

SEVERAL years have passed and the Pettis County Conservation Club has been practically unheard of. In spite of there being no meetings, Frank Hugelman who was then president, kept his contracts with the State Conservation Commission and succeeded in getting some fish put into lakes and streams in the county.

Now the war is over, everything is settling back to peace time operations, and reorganization of the club is to be started. The starting is a meeting to be held Tuesday night at the court house in the Assembly Room. Sportsmen, farmers, and those who are interested in wildlife are invited to be present at this gathering.

Dell Ilmberger, probably the most confirmed fisherman in the county, has called the meeting. Ilmberger is chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Wild Life Conservation Committee, and is deeply interested to see the club reorganized. Certainly no better leader could have been found to get the meeting together than Ilmberger.

The meeting will not only be turned to organization but several talks are to be given by representatives from the Commission, explaining what Pettis County can do to improve its Wild Life program.

On the program will be a most interesting motion picture on hunting and fishing in Missouri.

I anticipate several questions will be asked the representatives from the Commission regarding the situation on the Lake of the Ozarks. Although the Lake isn't in Pettis County, Pettis Countians certainly do their share in buying hunting and fishing licenses which permit them to go down on the big lake, and any good day will find a good percentage of these Pettis Countains with their rod and reel working.

This fish ladder, that was supposed to have been built at the dam, or hatcheries built to take care of that little matter. I learned the past week, that as far as anyone could learn the State does not have any contract which calls for such a ladder or such hatcheries.

However, at the time the big lake was being formed because of the dam, there was much talk about such a ladder and such hatcheries.

If the State doesn't have any contract for this—as were rumors—and if the State is really interested in the Lake from the standpoint of fishermen, then I would, on behalf of the sportsmen and women too, like to see some action, on the part of the Conservation Commission.

Goodness knows, the "hike" in hunting and fishing licenses entitles the sportsmen to more than having the timbers of the state taken care of. They expect something for their money in the line of fishing and hunting.

LOCAL wrestling fans will get an opportunity to see "Wee Willie" Davis of Hollywood, California, in action this Tuesday night at the wrestling matches. Davis, besides being an expert in the wrestling ring is also a star of the movies. He has appeared in numerous pictures.

Davis according to the records is somewhat a giant, being six feet five inches tall, according to the advance publicity. He has played in pirate pictures and also Arabian Nights, and other outstanding pictures.

He meets a worthy opponent in Ivan Kamaroff of Columbus, Ohio.

Carl Oliver Sousley Held In aJil Here

The Sousley, arrested in Kansas City and returned to Sedalia by Sheriff Ed Goetz, was Carl Oliver Sousley and not William Sousley as reported from the Sheriff's office. Carl Oliver Sousley was accused of taking a motor car and driving it to Warsaw.

He is being detained detained in the county jail pending a trial before Judge Dimmitt Hoffman.

Gil Dodds Again Beats MacMitchell

NEW YORK, Feb. 1—(AP)—Still threatening to abdicate, galloping Gill Dodds added another jewel to his reclaimed crown as king of the indoor milers tonight, capturing the Wanamaker mile at the Millrose games in Madison Square Garden by a good 40 yards in 4:09.2.

The Nebraska-born preacher who runs for the Boston Athletic Association simply sped out in front of his four opponents and went off and left them amid the cheers of a sellout crowd of 15,000 which already had seen the world indoor records equalled in the 60-yard dash and high hurdles.

Tommy Quinn of the New York Athletic Club managed to finish in second place with Eddie Walsh of Manhattan, Rune Gustafsson of Sweden and Leslie MacMitchell of the New York A. C., strung out behind him in that order.

Dodds' time was considerably short of his world indoor record of 4:06.4 but was only a tenth of a second slower than his performance of a week ago when he came out of a three-year retirement.

The last-place finish of MacMitchell, who had things his own way in the mile last season, must have been a bitter pill for the former New York University ace who said he never intended to lose to Dodds again.

Address Given Insurance Men

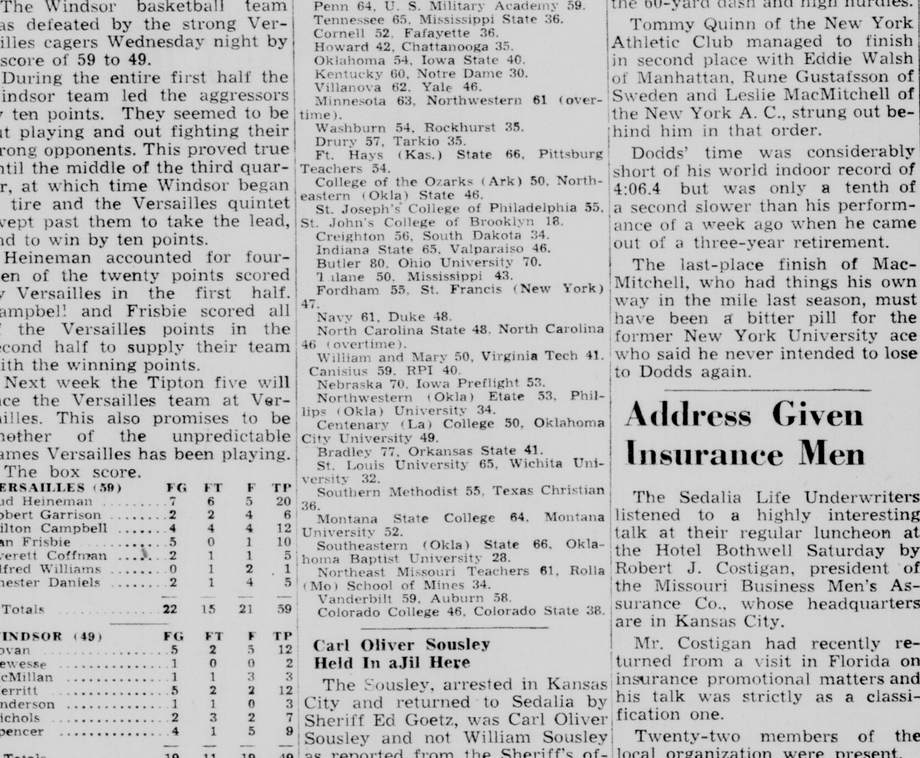

The Sedalia Life Underwriters listened to a highly interesting talk at their regular luncheon at the Hotel Bothwell Saturday by Robert J. Costigan, president of the Missouri Business Men's Assurance Co., whose headquarters are in Kansas City.

Mr. Costigan had recently returned from a visit in Florida on insurance promotional matters and his talk was strictly as a classification one.

Twenty-two members of the local organization were present.

Four sequence mechanisms enable the "mechanical brain" developed at Harvard to handle, pass on or transfer 60 numbers a second.

Football Last Season Hit It's All-Time High

Greatest Football In History of the Sport This Season

KERRVILLE, Tex., Feb. 1—(AP)—Amos Alonzo Stagg looked back over almost 60 years as player and coach in football, declared the game last season was at its all-time height and that 1947 would bring the greatest football in the history of the sport.

Never One To Live In Past

Never one to live in the past—that is, unless he can use it only as a comparison with the future—the grand old man of football, 57 years a coach and for 43 years a member of the National Rules Committee, said last year's peak came about because of better training and coaching and because each war contributed to the progress of sports.

"I recall even a resurgence after the war with Spain," said Stagg, here for the annual meeting of the rules committee. "It was more pronounced after the first World War and now it really is on a boom. The reasons, I think, are that outdoor life as experienced by a boy in the armed service leads to sports participation and war develops a keen sense of combat which football meets. The armed forces have, in each war, shown greater interest in sports promotion. In Warld War two we went in for sports on a great scale."

Great Scoring Weapon

Stagg said in referring to better football he was speaking not only of the brand of play but better operation through the rules of play, and he figured the most important change ever made was in 1906 when the forward pass was legalized. "That gave us another and important scoring weapon," he said. "Until that time we had been running into the big fellows in the line trying to budge them for a few yards."

"An illustration of the progress of football is what Biff Jones (athletic director at Army) said regarding the Army-Notre Dame game. He told me that each team knew the other so well each knew exactly how to stop the other."

Army and Notre Dame played a scoreless tie last fall.

The National Rules Committee will make its report on rules changes, if any, tomorrow.

Nothing of the committee's two days of deliberation has leaked out.

Johnny Kling Dies In Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 1. —(AP)—John G. (Johnny) Kling, former major league baseball catcher and manager, died here last night after an illness of six weeks. He was 71-year-old.

Kling, who reached stardom as a player with the Chicago Cubs and later managed Boston and Cincinnati of the National League, suffered a heart attack on a train while returning to Kansas City from Miami, Fla., death was caused by a cerebral hemorrhage.

Breaking into organized baseball with Rockford, Ill., of the old Western Association, Kling joined the Chicago Cubs four years later and in nine season with tht National League club played in four world series.

Generally considered one of the wealthiest of baseball's pastimers, Kling made his money in real estate investments. In 1933, about 20 years after his retirement from the major league, Kling bought control of the Kansas City Blues of the American Association. He sold the club to the New York Yankee chain system July 25, 1937.

A former world's champion pool player, Kling for many years owned half interest in a $225,000 billiard emporium here.

He was born in Kansas City, Nov. 13, 1875.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Lilliam Kling, and two daughters, all of Kansas City.

First Baptist Win Third S. S. Championship

All-Church Team Not Eligible for Title Remains Undefeated

The First Baptist team won the Sunday school basketball league championship for the third straight year when they defeated the East Sedalia Baptist team by the score of 21 to 12.

The First Baptist secured an early lead and held a small margin throughout the game. The score at the half was 11 to 7. Two Browns Together In Team Match

George Becker and Ray Schwarz Team Up for Big Event

WRESTLING SCHEDULE

Main Event
(Team Match)
Orville Brown and "Bad Boy" Brown
Wallace, Kansas — Polo, Mo.
Will Meet
George Becker and Ray Schwarz
Oakland, Calif. — Brooklyn, N. Y.
2 falls out of 3 — 90-minute limit.

Semi-Windup
"Wee Willie" Davis vs. Ivan Kamaroff
Hollywood, Calif. — Columbus, O.
2 falls out of 3 — 45-minute time limit.

Place: State Guard Armory.
Time: 8:30 p. m. Tuesday.

Endeavoring to bring to Sedalia action for the wrestling ring, and entertainment for local fans, Gus Karras has announced a team match to take the limelight on Tuesday's program. The Pettis County Post No. 16, American Legion, requested the match following the demands of local wrestling followers.

Due to the fact many believed "Bad Boy" Brown somewhat favored Champion Orville Brown, in matches last week, and Ray Schwarz went ahead and held it to a no-decision, it was decided to put the two Browns together against two boys who have become favorites in the local ring.

Anxious For Match

The opponent team is Ray Schwarz and George Becker, the latter a west coast title holder. Schwarz gave Brown everything he wanted in the matches last Tuesday and now is anxious to determine if he and Becker can out-do the "two Browns".

Local fans who didn't see last Tuesday's matches missed one of the best cards to appear here in several months, especially the match between Brown and Schwarz. When it was over, those present went away talking plenty about it.

"Wee Willie" Davis, Hollywood, California, who has appeared in several of the top-notch motion pictures in recent years, comes to Sedalia to wrestle Ivan Kamaroff of Columbus, Ohio. Davis, is considered one of the best in the business and the fact he stands more than six feet tall, makes him a strong opponent for Kamaroff.

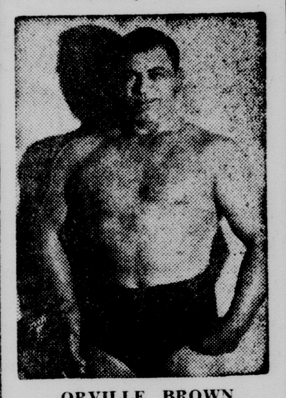

A New Referee

Endeavoring to satisfy fans with referees, Karras is endeavoring to obtain another who can qualify to the expectations of Sedalia mat followers. Referees are hard to obtain, and everyone can't be a referee, Karras remarked, but we will do our best.

A third match is trying to be obtained. It will be, if the boys agree, strictly amateur, between two high school youths from Marshall. Several weeks now they have requested to be used, and if at all possible Tuesday, they will get their chance.

A million carmiles of repair-free operation are expected of the heavy-duty shock absorbers used on streamlined trains.

The Chrysler Town and Country Six-passenger Convertible shown above is scoring a triumph among owners who seek the last word in distinctiveness in their motor cars. The body of this convertible is built of white ash with mahogany panels on plymetal plates. The woods are left in their natural colors. Interiors are finished in combinations of saran and leather or Bedford cord and leather that lend themselves to particularly artistic treatment. The car is built on a Chrysler "New Yorker" chassis and is powered by an eight-cylinder engine. Gyrol Fluid Drive and the Hydraulically-Operated transmission contribute to its fine performance. Generous size of the body members gives stability and freedom from squeaks and wearing.

Reject Flatly Request For Grid Leaves

Blanchard, Davis And Poole May Be Out Of Country Next Season

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1—(AP)—Three West Point football greats—Felix Blanchard, Glenn Davis and Barney Poole—were thrown a big monetary loss Friday when the war department flatly rejected their requests for furloughs to play pro football.

With a clamor of opposition to their requests rising on capitol hill, Secretary of War Patterson acted swiftly. He not only turned them down but virtually tabbed them for service overseas where, he said, "there is a shortage of second lieutenants."

Thus, when another gridiron season rolls around, the famous trio may be far from the roaring crowds and the big money.

Asked For Four Months

The three stars—many regard Blanchard and Davis as the academy's greatest one-two gridiron combination—had asked for four months fall leave following their graduation next June.

The war department's formal announcement said:

"The requirements of military training and service for young officers are such that the war department cannot favorably consider granting extended leave of absence for engaging in private enterprise.

"It is the current practice to send all newly commissioned officers to army service schools for a period of several months of additional training before joining their units. Following this schooling such officers are now being sent on foreign service where there is a shortage of second lieutenants.

"In making this decision careful consideration was given to all factors involved including those peculiar to the cases in question.

"The secretary of war felt that any other decision would be inimical to the best interest of the service."

Patterson's mention of a need for lieutenants abroad could mean that Blanchard, Davis and Poole might not even see a professional game, let alone play in one.

It also was in line with a suggestion by Chairman Andrews (R-NY) of the house armed services committee that the three be assigned to occupation duty in Germany or Japan just like many another "shavetail."

"N" Formation Is In

Even before Patterson announced his ruling, congressmen lined up in an "N" formation—"N" for "no"—against the players' bid to play for pay.

Strong interest had been aroused because of their outstanding ability and the desire of many fans that they not be cut off from the game at the peak of their ability. Davis and Blanchard were three times chosen for the all America backfield and Poole was a star end.

The question arose as to the possibility of their resigning from the army. However, when a cadet enters West Point he is pledged to serve eight years, including the four he spends at the academy. One officer said there might be a question whether resignations would be accepted.

Rep. Twyman (R-Ill), a navy veteran of both world wars, quarterbacked the capitol hill move against granting the requested leaves.

An army official said that the applications were scrutinized carefully, partly because they might set a precedent "for a lot of other people wanting leaves.' For instance, he said, it might inspire a lawyer to ask for leave to try a case in civilian courts.

Also, while Patterson didn't mention it, there is a 1916 law which apparently forbids leave for individuals if they plan to "compete" against a civilian in civilian activities.

Twyman told newsmen he was "shocked" that the department even gave serious thought to the applications.

"Are West Point and Annapolis to be coaching schools for future professional football players, or are they designed to train army and navy officers?" he asked.

Rep. Goff (R-Idaho) an ex-footballer, commented that if Blanchard, Davis and Poole are granted the requested leave, "the lowliest unheralded private would be entitled to an equal opportunity to be released from his military duties to make more money on the outside."

"I do not want to judge the three cadets harshly," Goff added, "for behind it all is probably the urging of promoters who have their eyes on gate receipts, but Blanchard, Davis and Poole ought to remember the draftees who faced combat dangers and hardships in Europe or the Pacific while, safe on the Hudson, they were enjoying a military education at public expense."

New Auto Baby is Baby-Size With Engine in Front or Rear

Bobbi-Kar, with and without body. Manufacturer says 47-horsepower engine may be shifted from rear to front drive in 15 minutes. Because of production problems and material shortages, models probably will no be rolling off assembly lines until late summer.

By DAN COBB
NEA Special Correspondent

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (NEA)—The newest manufacturer to try to buck the automobile field has found an easy way to give the buyer a choice of engine in the front or engine in the rear, but he's finding it no easier than anybody else to get the models into the dealers' show-rooms, no matter where the engine is.

In a wartime bomber modification plant at Birmingham's municipal airport, the Bobbi-Kar Corp. is completing prototype models, for show purposes only, of an undersized automobile for grown-ups that grew out of a flashy, yellow custom model a man built for his young son.

The adult model will come with the motor in back and a baggage compartment under the hood, or vice versa, depending on the customer's choice. But the buyer can change his mind—and the motor—almost as easy as changing an old-fashioned clinch-type tire. It is supposed to take only about 15 minutes to remove 11 bolts, transfer it fore or aft, and bolt it tight again.

Its actual production faces the same problems as the established auto manufacturers and the other newcomers alike. Originally, Bobbi-Kars were to start rolling off the assembly lines last December. Now dealers (the manufacturer says they have signed up in 800 cities) are being told that late summer looks more promising.

The first yellow car that A. S. Williams built for his son, Bobby, attracted so much attention in San Diego that a group of business men decided to back it with an eye to low income groups, youngsters, families who wanted a second small car, and the export trade where fuel economy is a major point.

The project ran into troubles in San Diego, partly because of the cost of moving materials and parts cross-country and partly from the California Securities Commission. The corporation moved here, to the heart of the southern steel production and fabrication industry. Then Williams went out in a reorganization that brought G. D. Keller, former vice-president of Studebaker, to the presidency of Bobbi-Kar. J. S. Liefeld, one-time Chrysler engineer, is vice-president in charge of engineering, and Roy Faulkner, who once was president of Auburn and vice-president of Pierce-Arrow, is a director.

The Bobbi-Kar is small, but not a midget. It is to have a 92-inch wheel base, a 46-inch seat, 16½-inch tires, and leg-room about the same as in any low-priced car. Its wheel-base is a foot longer than is listed for the Crosley. But it still is 24 inches under the Chevrolet. The seat width is 2½ inches less than the Chevrolet rear seat and 8¾ inches under the Chevrolet front seat. The Crosley has split front seats, each 20 inches wide, and its rear seat is 32½ inches.

For domestic use a motor developing 47 horsepower, geared for a top speed of 70 miles an hour, is promised. For export only 25 horsepower and a 60-mile top is planned.

Four models are scheduled—a coupe, a five-passenger sedan, a station wagon and a package delivery car. While prices have not been definitely fixed, company officials hope to hit the market in the $600-to-$700 range.

In general, aside from the movable motor, the Bobbi-Kar is quite conventional mechanically. The only other real novelty is torsalastic rubber-bonded-to-steel suspension, which is supposed to give smoother riding, and eliminates spring lubrication. It never has been used before in passenger cars, the company says, but was invented by the B. F. Goodrich Co. and has been thoroughly tried out on buses.

The goal is an assembly line that will produce 800 cars a day in a plant that will employ about 7,000 persons. Right now there are few except clerks and office workers on the job, plus the small force engaged in completing the show models.

First showing is scheduled for New York, in February, if the desired accommodations can be wangled from others who have them dated up. Then the show models will be moved on for public exhibition in Chicago and later in California.

Meanwhile advertising has been begun in this country, Canada, South America, Cuba, Mexico, Costa Rica, China, India, Spain, Portugal, South Africa and the Philippines.

Republicans Must Find New Leadership

Col. R. R. McCormick Publisher Of Chicago Tribune Declares

LAWTON, Okla., Feb. 1—(AP)—Colonel Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of the Chicago Tribune, said Friday Republican party would have to find new leadership if it is to succeed in the 1948 presidential election—"they have been underdogs so long they don't know how to take the lead."

McCormick, who has been making a tour in his private plane, came here to attend a meeting tonight of the Fort Sill branch of the First Division Society. He served in the field artillery in World War One.

He predicted during an interview that neither Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York nor former Governor Harold Stassen of Minnesota would receive the Republican presidential nomination and expressed doubt Senator Robert A. Taft (R-Ohio) would have a chance. McCormick is a Republican.

The publisher said he believes Oklahoma and other western states are in a good position to attrace many additional industries as industry disperses "to meet the need of the atomic age."

He said that in the Chicago area many of the larger firms have started moving their plants to open spaces and added he believed the trend would become general.

The atomic age will cause industry to become dispersed to better survive any effects that might result from use of atomic bombs. He said.

McCormick is the guest of Maj. Gen. Clift Andrus, commanding general of the field artillery center at nearby Fort Sill.
